LEGISLATIVE NOTES

The senate made short work of the bill doing away with the non-partisan ballot. Only eight minutes was required to kill it.

The anti-picketing bill was one of the hardest fought measures in the house. It had only two votes more than was necessary for passage.

The senate passed the farm bureau seed bill after amending it so farmers can sell seeds in certain quantities. This bill now goes to the governor.

An attempt was made in the house to revive the Cronin bonding bill but it failed. Such a law as this will undoubtedly be passed sooner or later.

Speaker Anderson was presented with a handsome gold headed cane by the members of the house and Mrs. Anderson was given a big fern and a box of candy.

In spite of the fact that both houses are anxious to finish their work and go home the practice still continues of wasting lots of oratory upon the desert air at every opportunity.

The senate committee on revenue and taxation has its back up because of alleged misrepresentations of the new revenue bill and proposes to make detractors of the bill come in and prove their statements.

After hearing the report of the committee that was appointed to investigate rents in Omaha the house decided that it is not necessary to take any further action. The committee found no evidence of profiteering.

Five thousand dollars a year is getting to be the fashionable salary for Nebraska officials. This is the amount fixed for the clerk of the supreme court. The house also agreed to fix the salary of the supreme court reporter at $4,000 a year after once cutting it to $3,000.

The bill uniting Douglas and Sarpy counties was amended so the new county would be known as Sarpy instead of Douglas and was then killed. When it came to a show down neither county seemed anxious for a union.

The senate is evidently in no hurry about quitting. A motion to appoint a committee to confer with a house committee on the question of adjournment was voted down. It is hoped that the business can be wound up by the end of next week but there is no certainty that such will be the case.

The house passed the Omaha charter bill without spending any time in discussion. This is the largest bill in point of size that was submitted. The opinion seemed to be that if Omaha wants this bill it should have it and that no time should be spent in argument. The senate had already passed the bill.

The state chamber of commerce is making an active fight against the taxation bill because it authorizes the tax commissioner to reassess property. It is said this feature would result in making county and local assessors mere figureheads. This bill is going to have active opposition in the house from other sources.

The house also passed the substitute water power bill without discussion in spite of the fact that R. B. Howell, who was backing the original bill, asked that it be killed if any changes were made in it. The substitute contains some radical departures from the Howell ideas but the committee thought the changes desirable.

Governor McKelvie sent a message to the senate asking the passage of a bill allowing the state banking department of trade and commerce to act as receiver for failed banks. The purpose of this bill is to keep such banks under the supervision of this department instead of turning them over entirely to the courts. It will also save expense.

The senate took favorable action Thursday on S. F. 249, which is the same as house roll 1 which was killed by the house early in the session. The vote in the house was 65 to 35. There is no reason to think that the decision will be changed when the house gets another crack at it. This is the bill that gives the Omaha water board the right to go into the electric lighting business.

A call of the house was necessary last Thursday morning to secure the passage of the Christian Science bill. Considerable discussion was caused by this bill. The bill has passed the senate and is now up to the governor. It legalizes the practice of Christian Science and makes the work of the practitioners easier but does not exempt them from observing quarantine laws and regulations.

The state prison now contains 635 prisoners, the largest in the history of that institution and about a third more than it is intended to accommodate. Warden Fenton has served notice on sheriffs that they cannot bring any more prisoners to the pen until some of those now there are discharged. The crowded condition is due to the wave of crime and to the suspension of paroles.

When the dead line fell Monday at 2 o'clock on all bills yet in the hands of the sifting committee 71 were left out in the cold. Among them is the press association bill requiring the publication of the personal tax roll and the Green bill regarding political advertising. Newspaper men and printers will not object to the killing of the latter. A number of other good bills were killed. Only seven bills were reported out by the sifters.

After a four-hour debate the house committee of the whole advanced the language bill to third reading. The vote was 65 to 31. The chief feature of the debate was the strong stand taken for the bill by Dr. Hoffmeister, who was born, reared and educated in Germany. He says most Americans of German birth want such a law. Some strong statements were made in the course of the debate which could not have been enjoyed very much by those who have been lobbying for the passage of the bill.

The house passed the grain growers' warehouse bill with only one dissenting vote. This bill which provides for warehouses on the farm and the issuance of certificates against such grain. A fee of $5 must be paid to an inspector before certificates can be issued. It is believed that this bill will be a benefit to farmers by making it possible for them to hold their grain and equalize the supply that goes to market. The bill is now ready for the governor.

The house made short work of the anti-cigarette bill last Thursday evening. The intention was to dispose of it in short order but a few supporters of the bill wanted to air their views and two or three made short talks against it. The bill was killed by a vote of about 2 to 1. If there was any public sentiment in favor of such a bill a different story might be told but most of the members were convinced that the enactment of such a law would be adding only so much dead timber to the statutes.

The senate child welfare committee killed the senate movie bill and reported the house bill for consideration. Senator Beebe has a substitute bill which he is going to try to get passed in place of the house bill. Senator Beebe's bill gives a list of pictures that may not be shown and requires each exhibitor and distributor to deposit $1,000 with the state treasurer. If he is convicted of violating the law he forfeits the money. If not, he may get his money back in thirty days after he sells out or quits business but it must remain on deposit as long as he is in business.

Governor McKelvie Issues the Annual Arbor Day Proclamation

Governor S. R. McKelvie, in his Arbor day proclamation issued Wednesday, appeals to Nebraskans of all ages to renew the diligence of the early settlers by planting trees on April 22.

Governor McKelvie calls attention to the fact that Nebraska was the first state in the union to observe Arbor day, and reminds the citizens that in the early days the settlers planted thousands of trees each year that the territory might not seem such an endless stretch of prairie.

School teachers of the state and superintendents of all institutions are urged to "present to the attention of the pupils the propriety of doing something to encourage the growth of timber about the home."

The proclamation follows:

"Trees have been regarded as things of beauty in all the ages of the past. When God made the Garden of Eden, the first things he planted in it were trees. He made them that they might be good for food and please the eye, and when John the Divine described the Holy City and the River of Life, he tells us there were trees on either side of it.

"The first settlers of the territory of Nebraska saw an almost endless stretch of prairie, and in order to break the monotony, tree planting became a necessity. The first groves were started along the Missouri river and planting them on homesteads and farms of the west. Thus, groves sprang up in every direction. Many of the trees from those sprouts furnished wood during the late coal famine while the world war was upon us.

Is Nation-Wide.

"Although Arbor day had its birth in Nebraska, it is now generally observed throughout the republic—even in those states where native timber abounds.

"The tree that you plant today, taken care of, will grow and flourish as a monument to your care and industry. Trees shelter man and beast from the heat of summer and winds of winter. The evening zephyrs that filter through the leaves carry health and strength to every man, to everything that breathes. On them birds build their nests and rear their young, and from the topmost branches they sing their reveilles awakening the husbandman to his daily toil and sends him forth with joy to cultivate the soil.

"It is feared by some that we are not making as much of the day as we should. If this be true, let us renew our diligence. Let everyone who is old enough plant one or more trees. The 22nd of April is a legal holiday and as governor, I call upon the teachers in our public school and institutions of the state to present to the attention of the pupils the propriety of doing something to encourage the growth of time about the home and in any spot where the practical purpose of tree planting may be observed.

"That there may be a more general observance of the day, I, Samuel R. McKelvie, governor, do hereby, in keeping with the statutes of Nebraska, set apart and proclaim Friday, the twenty-second day of April, 1921, Arbor day."
