Ex-Soldiers Must Convert War Insurance
 Before March 3, 1926

The decision of the bureau of War Risk Insurance that the more than half a million ex-service men and women carrying war risk term insurance must convert their policies into one of the permanent forms of insurance before March 3, 1926, or lose their insurance, is meeting with some degree of opposition, particularly from the posts of the American Legion, according to reports received here.

The bureau's ruling is based upon the resolution passed by the last congress declaring that for the purpose of certain wartime legislation, the war with Germany was to be considered at an end. The legislation specially included the war risk act and its amendments. It was provided in the war risk act itself that term insurance might be carried until five years after the "end of the war", and it was further provided that "the words end of the war" as used herein shall be deemed to mean the date of proclamation of exchange of ratification of the peace treaty of peace unless the president shall, by proclamation, declare a prior date, in which case the date so proclaimed shall be deemed to be the "end of the war" within the meaning of this act."

There is a wide difference of opinion among officials in the bureau of war risk insurance as to whether the Congressional resolution justifies the ruling that the war risk bureau was ended on March 3, 1921. The National Legislative committee of the American Legion has asked the Comptroller of the Currency for a review of the bureau's ruling.

AT THE MOVIES

Tom Mix, always a favorite at the Imperial, will be the attraction this evening in William Fox's latest picture of the wild, "The Untamed." It tells how Jim Silent, the lone rider and outlaw, declared feud with Whistling Dan; how one of Jim Silent's men strove for the girl, one for the horse and one to "get" that black devil of a dog; and their desperate efforts to achieve their ends. This is a Tom Mix picture that you'll want to see.

There are two features for the Wednesday bill. Dave Hawthorne and his Western Beauties, a real girl show, with "Buddie" Kane, a good comedian and soft shoe dancer, and Mae Hawthorne, prima donna-soprano, and Jack Pickford in "The Man Who Had Everything," the film attraction. When Mark Bullway found that he couldn't change his son's outlook on life by parental persuasion he decided to try a new and novel method. He gave the boy everything he wanted, motors, bull dogs, diamond pendants and rings for the girl with whom he was infatuated. The trick worked. The boy became sick of those things for which he had longed for. Jack Pickford gives his usual convincing portrayal as the pampered son in this Goldwyn feature.

with Wall Street wisdom, in "Peaceful Valley." You bet it's rube stuff! The scheming city guy who gets his claws on to the farm—the blue eyed country girl who elopes with him to the city—the rube brother who hikes out after her—and all the quaint old folks of Peaceful Valley—they're all in it! But isn't that sort of a story in which you like Charlie Ray best, with the hick-humor, the sob and hefty wallops?

"Black Beauty," pictured from the famous story by Anna Sewell will be shown Saturday. This is a masterpiece of fiction made into a unique film. It is what might be termed an extraordinary production in that it contains two stories interwoven in such a manner that they are always separated, yet the action blends into one narrative. This is the work of Lillian and George Randolph Chester, who left the story written by Anna Sewell as they found it, and added to it an inside story concerning the friends of Black Beauty. This is the feature play of the month.

WRITER SEES A BIGGER JOB FOR PARENTS

The appalling increase in juvenile crime during the last decade is keenly analyzed by Frederick Becholdt in the May Sunset. He traces present tendencies to present conditions of family life.

"Up to twenty years ago conditions made it easier than it is now to guide children," says Mr. Becholdt. "The family circle was pretty tight prior to 1900; everyone was staying home in the evening. The children were sitting round the table with their father and mother, which gave the latter a good chance to handle her job as mentor."

"That evening family circle is becoming a thing of the past. Apartment houses, women's activities outside the home, amusements and demands of urban civilization have helped to break it up. The mother does not see her young as often as she used to; she doesn't know what they are up to unless she has the sense and ability to get their close confidence. It is not easy for her to guide them in the old way; and she has not yet learned a new method by which she can handle her parental task; and at the same time mingle with her emancipated sisters in their civic duties.

"It would be just as well, therefore, to remember that you are seeing that child."

"Your job is a great deal bigger than the task of those who went before you. You have not even realized its size. You have not caught up to the times. And if you do not at least make a real effort to catch up with them, there is a chance that the bitterest grief which can come to a father or a mother will be your portion."
