LOST

Sixty golden minutes,
Each made up of sixty diamond seconds
They are gone! gone forever!
Don't care!
Was Fishin'.

That was Monday, and it rained as easy out to the dam Monday afternoon as it did here yesterday, even seemed to be without a cloud, but how it did pour, and we got stuck in the mud, and had to put the chains on in the mud about knee deep, then I had a new jack, and it was a poor one, and bent out of shape, just using it with my hands.

Had good company, though. The Baptist preacher, and a good fellow he is, too, didn't seem to mind it a bit that we didn't get home till ten forty-five.

If there is any one thing I cannot find time for at all it is for the fellow who always crabs. Not the least of his arguments is "Well, why didn't we think to bring along some lunch," or, "Well, I can't see why it always has to rain every time I try to go fishing or hunting." But Minort never says a word to mar the pleasure of the trip. Don't forget him, fellows, when he can get away. And he has his own car, too.

Say, there is one word in the last paragraph that makes me think of a story:

First Private: "Say, can you imagine anything worse than having 'cooties'?"

Second Private: "Yes, Suppose you had 'em and they chirped."

Bessie: "I won't marry any man who won't look me straight in the face while he is talking to me."

Jesse: "Then wear 'em longer, dearie."

Stockmen and Cowboys.

We want you all to know that we are expecting you to come in and make this headquarters while in town during the big Stockmen's convention and race meet during next week, June 15, 16 and 17. And we will treat you right whether you want something in our line or not, but you will no doubt remember while in the store that you will need during the summer and the haying season in the early fall that pair of new Russell Gloves, and we want to call your attention to the fact that we have them and that the price is right on them in our store.

Yours as always,

E. G. Laing
