

In The MOVIES

Bryant Washburn in "A Full House" is the attraction at the Imperial tonight. Mr. Washburn appears as George Howell, a young newly-wed who is involved in remarkable complications before he dares explain to his bride of a day the whys and wherefores of a strange business trip. As an attorney, Washburn seeks to recover the love letters of a friend from a San Francisco chorus girl. From the time he leaves home the fun is fast and furious, involving an exchange of suitcases, stolen jewels and other developments that create rapid-fire and continuous laughter.

Sessue Hayakawa, the Japanese star, appears in the Wednesday photoplay, "The First Born." A comedy, "Let Me Explain," rounds out a good bill.

Thursday's feature is "His Temporary Wife," with Ruby De Remer as the star. It's a society drama with some unusual situations. In addition to a clever plot, the star is said to be the "most beautiful blonde since Venus," which ought to be a drawing card.

A Nine Per Cent Decrease in Supply of Feeding Cattle

A comparative scarcity of feeding cattle next fall seems probable according to information gathered by the U. S. bureau of markets and crop estimates.

The number of beef cattle on hand January 1 in Washington, Oregon, Idaho, Montana, Wyoming, North Dakota and South Dakota was 5,009,000 or 400,000 less than on January 1, 1920 according to the bureau of crop estimates. This represents a decrease of approximately 9 per cent. In certain sections of the above-named states the decrease was undoubtedly more than that, some stockmen declaring that in their particular localities the number of beef cattle available was not more than 50 per cent of normal.

That there has been a general decrease in the number of beef cattle in the United States would seem to be proved by the fact that during each of the past eleven months receipts at 68 live stock markets have been less than during the corresponding month a year previous, the total decrease for the first five months of 1921 amounting to approximately 928,000 head. Furthermore, the fact that receipts of cattle and calves during the month of May at such markets as Denver, Cheyenne, Salt Lake City, Pueblo, San Antonio and Fort Worth were, in many instances, less than half those of the corresponding month last year, would seem to indicate that the shortage was especially great in the range sections of the country.

Normally a considerable percentage of the cattle marketed from the range states consists of stockers and feeders. These are bought on the great middle western markets by feeders and taken back to the corn belt and eastern feed lots for finishing. The past winter, however, was very favorable from the standpoint of the cattle raisers of the northwest. The weather as a rule, was mild and spring opened early. Good grass was available at a much earlier date than usual. Calving occurred under favorable conditions and a sub-normal number of cows produced a comparatively high average of off-springs. Except for high winds, weather and range conditions and reports indicate a sufficient supply of grass and leguminous crops to have been good throughout the spring, carrying a normal supply of cattle through an entire year.

This abundance of feed and the fact that cattle went onto spring grass in much better flesh condition than usual leads stockmen to believe that range cattle will not only start marketward earlier than usual, but that the average weight and quality will be above normal. Should this last condition eventuate it will probably mean that next fall feeders will have to compete with slaughterers for a larger percentage of the offerings than usual and in such competition the slaughterer usually has an advantage.

Another factor which may be expected to reduce the number of stock and feeding cattle is the emergency tariff act. During 1920 importations of beef cattle from Canada amounted to approximately 300,000 head. Competent observers have estimated that of such Canadian cattle fully 75 per cent may be classified as stockers and feeders. Most of these cattle are distributed to the feeders of the middle western and eastern parts of the United States through the markets at Chicago and East Buffalo. The fact that the new tariff law imposes a tax of 30 per cent ad valorem on cattle imported for other than breeding purposes may reasonably be expected to materially curtail these Canadian imports.

In brief, it can be stated that if the anticipated shortage of stocker and feeder cattle materializes next fall, it will probably be due largely to: First, a known and material decrease in the number of cattle in the range states; second, a marked improvement in the average weight and flesh condition of the cattle offered, rendering a larger percentage; and, third, a sharp curtailment of imports of stocker and feeder cattle from Canada.

New Royal Highlander Rates Are Illegal, Says State Supreme Court

Raising of rates by the Royal Highlanders of Nebraska at a special meeting of the "supreme executive castle" at Denver in 1919 was illegal, and the organization has no power to enforce the new rate schedule, under an opinion rendered by the Nebraska supreme court which reverses a decision of the district court in Lancaster county in the proceeding brought by William Widener and other members against W. E. Sharp, head of the order, and other supreme officers, says the Lincoln Star.

The suit was dismissed in district court, but the appeal tribunal reverses and remands the case with directions to issue a perpetual injunction restraining the officers from collecting or attempting to collect the higher rates.

Under Nebraska laws, fraternal insurance societies must have a representative form of government, and their constitution and by-laws can be changed only by an assembly of duly elected delegates representing the membership at large.

The supreme executive castle of the Royal Highlanders, which meets every four years, held its regular session in 1917. No action was taken on rates at that time, but two years later, in 1919, the same delegates were convened at Denver in special session and voted to adopt the scale of increased rates.

This, the high court says, was an unwarranted assumption of authority, as the members of the supreme executive castle in 1917 were not empowered to represent the membership in a meeting held two years later. In fact, the opinion asserts, there was no provision in the laws of the organization whereby a special meeting could be held at all.

Another regular quadrennial meeting of the supreme executive castle comes this year, and it is presumed that efforts may be made to re-enact the higher rates in a legal manner, to govern the society hereafter.

COULD BEAT HANDS SHUCKING HIS CORN

At Least J. A. White Would Bet So, After Being Relieved of Dyspepsia by Taniac.

"My wife and myself have had stomach trouble," says Mr. J. A. White, residing on the Leestown Pike, R. F. D. No. 6, near Lexington, Ky., "and have both been nervous and run down."

"We could not eat anything without suffering afterwards and could not sleep at night. We were regular nervous dyspeptics. We tried many remedies without permanent benefit until we heard of Taniac. I got this medicine and began using it. We noticed immediate results. We are both greatly improved by Taniac. We give all credit for the change of health to Taniac. It is a remarkable medicine.

"I personally feel so good that I told my hands a day of two ago that I could beat any of them shucking corn. I meant it and believe I could have beat 'em all."

Of all the medicines that afflict humanity chronic dyspepsia, such as Mr. and Mrs. White suffered from, is probably the most prevalent and hours might be consumed in describing the sufferings, mental and bodily, of the victims of chronic dyspepsia. A morbid, unreal, whimsical and melancholy condition of the mind, aside from the nervous physical suffering, is the usual state of the average dyspeptic and life seems scarcely worth the living.

Taniac, the celebrated medicine, was designed especially for overcoming this distressing condition and millions of people have taken it with the most astonishing and gratifying results. It seems to go straight to the spot, toning up and invigorating every organ of the body.

If the Consuming Public Only Knew

The Painful Facts

About the Coal Business

They would fill up their bins within forty-eight hours and protect themselves against shortage that is inevitable. Within less ninety (90) days, they will see high grade coal selling at a "big premium".

The Explanation is Very Simple

In previous years industries in our large industrial centers have consumed in the form of "slack" from forty to fifty percent of all the coal mined for domestic purposes and have paid good prices for it. Today—most of these industries are idle. They are not in the market for "slack" and the slack removed from the perfectly prepared coal now being offered to the public at reasonable prices is having to stand on track at the mines for days and sometimes even weeks because there is no demand for it.

Furthermore, when this slack is finally sold the returns are ridiculously small—invariably below cost. This is a truthful statement of the situation today and every logical consumer knows it is bound to get worse as the season advances and the demand for prepared sizes increases.

The Whole Situation is Plain as Day and our advice to all consumers and dealers is to buy right now while they can get what they want at reasonable prices.

We are not responsible for the future but stand ready to serve you NOW with nicely prepared coal from six (6) of the most reliable and best equipped mines in the State of Illinois.

We carry a complete line of coal, for every purpose. Let us fill your bins today—NOW!
