Complains Against Frats.

LINCOLN—People living in the neighborhood of university fraternity houses have complained to Mayor Zehrung that they are unable to sleep at night on account of carousals of students lasting until 3 a. m. Compliments were made against three organizations. One of the complainants told the mayor that the students said it would do no good to report them, as they have "police protection." Mayor Zehrung denies the charge, and promises students will be expected to live up to the standard exacted from the rest of the city. One of the complainants wants the fraternity home declared a "nuisance," and threatens to take the matter into court.

Saturday Constitution Day, But Governor the Only One to Observe It

Saturday was national Constitution day. Governor McKelvie, in asking citizens to make fitting observance of the date, issued the following proclamation:

"It was in an hour of the nation's greatest trial that Abraham Lincoln said: 'It is not the constitution as I should like to have it, but as it is that is to be defended. The constitution will not be preserved or defended until it is informed an obeyed in every part of every day of these United States.' This is the spirit of patriotism and fidelity to duty that has enabled America to survive in spite of every obstacle.

"The problems that clamor for solution today are no less important than those that have impressed themselves upon the nation's history since its beginning and I am confident that their solution may be traced directly to an understanding of the constitution and the purposes that the fathers had in mind when it was adopted.

"With these thoughts in mind, I am moved to direct attention to the one hundred and forty-fifth anniversary of the constitution of the United States, and to urge upon the people of Nebraska the importance of observing this day in a fitting manner, so that the fundamentals of our form of government may be clearly understood and an adherence to these principles guaranteed."
