THE PARLON'S CORNER

By Rev. B. J. Minot, Pastor of the First Baptist Church, Alliance)

A Few Autumn Thoughts.

"We all do fade as a leaf," said Isaiah of old. One cannot see the falling of a leaf at this time of year without being reminded of Isaiah's words. The object lesson is not simply a leaf, but a fading leaf. Fading leaves suggest at least four lessons:

1.—They are emblems of man's mortality. Human life at its best is short, and nothing in nature suggest it as a fading leaf. It is weak, frail, held to the parent tree by such a slender bond. The least breeze at a certain time will cause the leaf to tremble and flutter, then it is seen flowing through the air. Even in the country where winter is not known the leaf has its time of fading. When the writer lived in South America he remembered that as sure as a certain month came around the leaves would begin to change colors than the forest were made golden by the millions of leaves that had faded and fallen. Even if the leaf, lasts a whole season and lives its appointed time, it does not retain its verdure and vigor. The sap of life begins to fail, and the tints begin to change. The leaf fades sooner than it falls. The flowers wither, before the grass upon which it grows dies. Man's physical and mental glory begins to decline sometime long before the real man dies. The autumn comes into the life of leaves with noiseless steps. It is not heard or seen, but the result of its coming is apparent to all. So with death, it is noiseless, sometime unexpected, it enters the chamber of the poor and rich alike.

2.—The falling leaves exhibit their greatest beauty and in this is an emblem of a christian life. Before the leaf falls it breaks forth into its greatest and richest hues. "Have you never known," says someone, "known better than you like to confess, by the exquisite advancing loveliness of his moral feature, as by a surer symptom than any physical indication, that one whom you loved so well was nearing the end?" Have you not seen those and joy and Christ-like sweetness which showed by how slight a tenure the life was held and how soon the scene would change, and all that made earth so pleasant was all going from your sight? We all do fade as leaves, but let our fading be as the leaves, let our last be our best; and the truth of God be reflected and his glorious sanctity of our latter years be in peace and love and grace of our dying.

3.—The fading leaves is a proof that their work is accomplished, and that their mission is fulfilled. The leaves of trees are made subservient by an allwise God, to most important end. One of their chief functions is to keep up the purity of the atmosphere. Christ said to his disciples, "Ye are the salt of the earth," he might have said of them, "Ye are the leaves of the world," and have said the same thing. Our office is to stay the moral pollution which surrounds us, and to breathe a healthy and life-giving influence. Each leaf that this Fall will fade will leave an influence that will help the leaves of next season. So each generation leaves its influence on the next generation. Take the following leaves that have faded and fallen, but whose influence we are enjoying today. The preacher, Sunday school teachers, parents, and moral leaders, as well as the vice hating statesmen of the past. We owe much of what we enjoy to those who have lived before us. Will the generation to come be bettered by our having lived on this earth?

4.—Lastly, the fading of Autumn tell us that death is the precursor of life. Every leaf that falls carries with it both a memorial of death and a prophesy of a future life. That leaf will again live, so will the life that has done its work as God would have to do. To enjoy the future life with the redeemed, however, we must fulfill our mission of purifying society by a godly life. "We all do fade as a leaf."

THE LIVESTOCK MARKET

OMAHA, Neb., Sept. 22.—CATTLE—Receipts, 3,200. Thursday's run of cattle was moderate and the general market just about steady at the decline of the fore part of the week. Strictly choice corned yearlings are probably steady with a week ago, sales today being around $9.00@9.75. Heavy heaves have been bit hard and sales at $7.75@8.25 today looked 50@75c lower than a week ago. Western rangers, steady at the week's decline of fully 50c and the same was true in the main on cowstuffs and stockers and feeders. Beef steers, $7.00@9.50; beef steers and heifers, $7.75@10.35; western Nebraska cattle, $2.00@6.15; Wyoming $5.25@6.25. Colorado, $3.85@5.25; Montana, $5.50.

HOGS—Receipts, 5,000. Prices on most of the supply settled at moderate declines. Packing droves were put up at figures 15@20c lower, but an active spot developed in the trade and some business was reported not over 10@15c lower. The market as a whole was quoted a dime to a quarter lower.

ST. JOSEPH, Mo., Sept. 22.—CATTLE—Receipts, 2,000; opening steady, steers, $4.50@9.00; cows and heifers, $1.50@9.00; veals, $4.00@9.00. HOGS—Uneven, 15c to 50c lower; top, $8.00; bulk, $6.50@8.00. SHEEP—Receipts, 5,000; lambs 10c to 25c lower; lambs, steady, $7.00@8.25; feeders, $6.00@6.50; wethers, $4@4.75; yearlings, $5@5.75; ewes, $1@4.

Much of the trouble in this country is due to the fact that you are too all-fired lazy to do for yourself what somebody else charges you four prices to do for you.
