NOTICE

No hunting or trapping allowed on the W. W. Beck property in Garden county.

'Hearts of Youth', a picturization of Mrs. E. D. E. N. Southworth's famous novel, 'Ishmael,' is the attraction for tonight at the Imperial. 'Ishmael,' it will be recalled, turns upon the troubles of a young man over whose birth hangs a shadow which causes his repudiation by the aristocratic father of the girl he loves—and who loves him.

Gouverneur Morris' remarkable tale, 'The Penalty,' made into a film, will be shown Saturday. It tells the amazing story of one of the most original characters in fiction. No more bizarre forceful yet convincing character is to be found in any book than Mr. Morris' skillfully drawn 'Blizzard,' master mind of the underworld, who might have been a genius and a power for good had it not been for the mistake of an unskilled surgeon who made him a cripple for life.

Sunday's feature is Owen Moore in 'The Desperate Hero,' one of the best pictures in which this versatile screen star has played.

Carmel Myers in 'Cheated Love' is scheduled for next Monday. The opening sequences show Sonya, the girl of the story, as a Russian immigrant. She arrives in America to make her home with her father, a storekeeper of the Ghetto. In Russia there is a man whom she loves. The Russian is a young medical student who has submerged his heart and his ideals to his career as a surgeon. The American lover is a settlement worker, a composite of everything that a man should be. Sonya decides between them when the little Yiddish theatre, in which she works as a seamstress, is wrecked by an explosion and she calms the audience by singing a favorite song from the burning stage.

COMMENT & DISCOMMENT

The Arbuckle case, which is fortunately being tried with rapidity and promises to come to a successful conclusion without dragging out the agony unendurably, is the finest sort of meat for the muckrakers. The time was, a few years ago, when the muckrakers were confined to a few men who were disgruntled over their failure to get their share of the political grafts of their time, and who sought to make things uncomfortable for the fellows who were more successful. There were, of course, a few special magazine writers who found the public liked that sort of stuff and tried to give it to them.

Now that politics is no longer interesting, the muckrakers have turned to other things. And salacious scandals are not only more interesting to investigate, but will appeal to a much larger audience. It has been twenty-five or thirty years since newspapers discovered that by printing all the details of the filthy trials they might be condemned by a few, but that even those who condemned them most loudly read every line that could be printed. Nowadays the muckraking class contains not only those who write about facts that should be concealed, but those who read. And the Arbuckle case, because of the nationwide prominence of the scandal, has brought all of them to the front.

People who never so much as drank a glass of home brew in their entire blameless lives are having the opportunity to indulge in virtuous shudders over the 'orgies' of those wild movie men and women. For that matter, so are those who have done a little drinking. The first class is shocked at anything, but it takes more to shock them than it did twenty-five years ago. Do you remember, gentle reader, how everybody was just simply overcome at the details of the 'monkey dinner' given by society's elite at Newport? Judged by present day standards, that was a pretty tame affair.

We're getting a good bit of interesting information about the movie colony out in sunny California, as well as about Arbuckle and his immediate associates. It would appear that the movie stars are not so well thought of out in California, where they live, as they are in the rest of the country. Maybe this is because they know them better. The Californians are tremendously proud of the industry, and a few of the headliners are received in the best circles, but as a rule the movie people have had a cold shoulder turned in their direction.

The older residents (if there are such people in California) seem to be snobbish. The aristocracy there isn't one of wealth and position. Popularity doesn't enter into it. The movies made Los Angeles, they admit, inasmuch as the city has doubled in population in the past ten years and now ranks as the tenth in wealth in the country. But whenever the names of movie actors have been put up for membership in exclusive clubs, the doors were slammed tight shut, and have stayed that way. With plenty of money to spend, the movie people have built their own clubs and formed their own circle of society, which is just what happens anywhere else under similar circumstances.

Sudden wealth, however, doesn't carry with it the ability to take care of it properly. The Hollywood colony, it is said, has degenerated into a place where everyone spends money. With plenty of cash coming in all the time, and facilities for spending it somewhat limited, it is perhaps no more than natural that there should be some rivalry in devising ways and means to get rid of it and bring additional excitement into the lives of people who feed on nothing else, and therefore require their hours of recreation to be filled with something pretty wild in order to feel that they are doing anything at all out of the ordinary.

It doesn't come with much of a shock, therefore, to discover that the movie people frequent road houses and give booze parties, or that they gamble a little now and then, or even more often than that. 'Revels' seems to be a common word in the general indictment. So do several others. 'Gambling' is another charge, and we are told that the central figure in the present scandal has an ability to win at crap-shooting that is the envy of his friends and his enemies alike. But these things aren't any more than is to be expected of mushroom aristocracy in this day and age of the world. It really doesn't bear on the question at all. These things are to be found everywhere, and the fact that there are found oftener in California is simply because the people concerned have more money to spend.

The worst feature about it is the way the same society people who have refused to take the movie people into their circles are buzzing about now. Representatives of eighteen women's clubs, from the highest to the lowest, have reserved seats at the trials. They are going to reform the movie people, and they fondly imagine that by filling their ears with the filth of this particular trial they are somehow or other helping themselves in this self-imposed task. If one didn't know that the dear girls are in deadly earnest, one would be tempted to laugh. At that, we'll gamble that it was a harder job selecting applicants from the various clubs than it was getting them to go.

PLEASANT VALLEY

Mrs. Charles McNeely returned home Saturday morning from Council Bluffs, Ia., bringing her father and mother with her. The father is in very poor health.

Miss Naomi and Eldora Squibbs spent Sunday with Miss Lillian Ervine. Mr. and Mrs. Carl Roler are rejoicing over the arrival of a baby boy born September 25.

Miss Georgia Timblin and brother are spending a few days with their sister in the Pine Ridge.

The family of C. W. Cox have all been on the sick list the past week.

Mr. and Mrs. John Roberts spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Lew Roberts.

Mr. and Mrs. James Irvine visited at the Edward Feister home Thursday.

Mrs. Charles McNeely brought a baby girl home with her from the home at Council Bluffs.

There will be services at the school house next Sunday at 3 o'clock with Rev. Cox of Hemingford in charge. Everybody come.

Miss Leola Squibbs spent Sunday with her parents.

The big bosses of Pleasant Valley are going nuts over that road now. They think it should come through this community anyhow. We are all wondering what their next idea will be.

Mrs. Gust Peterson will entertain the ladies' aid of the Congregational church of Hemingford next Thursday evening, also the ladies of Pleasant Valley.

Mads Sorenson was a caller in the Pleasant Valley neighborhood Sunday evening. Wonder what the attraction is?

BLACKROOT

Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Dyer and son, Percy, left left the first of last week for their home at Bertrand. Word was received from them saying they arrived home safely the same day they left.

Nearly everybody in this vicinity seems to be having the grippe. Some have it quite hard, while others have it light.

Ira Hood was taken home from school Friday quite sick, but is better at this writing.

L. L. and G. E. Dyer motored to Alliance on business Friday.

Charles Moravsek and Mrs. Meeker and son motored to Hemingford Saturday.

Threshing is nearly all done and spud digging has started. Some fall grain is up while other fields are just being sowed. Mr. and Mrs. Charles Baldwin visited at the Roy Grosse home Saturday. Mr. and Mrs. Marshall Sheldon visited at the Powell home Sunday. George Flaherty and family motored to Scottsbluff one day last week to get tomatoes. They said there was quite a few left but the patch had been picked over quite a few times. Joe Romer started to dig spuds Tuesday. He took a load into Hemingford Wednesday and topped the market. The buyers said it was the nicest load this year. Mr. and Mrs. George Flaherty spent Sunday at Joe Romer's. Word was received Thursday morning of the death of Mrs. Jim Curry at Scottsbluff. The last report before her death stated that she was feeling fine. Everybody sympathizes with Mr. Curry and family, for she was a very kind mother and wife. Mr. and Mrs. Pete Farrel and Mr. and Mrs. Murphy and Mrs. Powell attended Mrs. Curry's funeral in Hemingford Saturday. Mr. and Mrs. Jay Hall have moved over into Sioux county. They are now occupying the Edward Leth house. Mr. and Mrs. Jay Hall visited at Ivor Meeker's home Sunday afternoon. Mr. and Mrs. Ivor Meeker visited at the Cal Leis home Sunday evening. Frank Caha and son, Charles, were out to Langford dam one day last week on a hunting trip. They say the ducks and hunters are thick.
