

NEBRASKA NEWS NOTES

Wants "Tango" Banned

LINCOLN—The tango dance, which went out of vogue in polite metropolitan society several years ago, still persists in some outlying communities of Nebraska. It is all the rage among the young people in Knox county, according to a letter received from Joseph F. Wirth of Pisheville. Wirth is much grieved for fear it will prove detrimental to their morals.

If the governor will furnish him with credentials showing his authority in the matter, Wirth promises that he will go out in his precinct, and all over Knox county, if desired, and put up big posters warning everybody to refrain from dancing the tango.

"Send me written papers to give me a permit to look over this matter," is his suggestion to the governor.

Evidently Wirth himself is not one who trips the light fantastic, as he says: "We people here would like to know something about the tango, city or town and country dances. Please give me information about this matter, what to do if they are prohibited in this state, as the young grade of people dance nothing now but what is called tango, and some couples make very bad looks, and these young children that are just growing out are all learning this bad dance, and as soon as they won't dance nothing but that."

Attendance Is Slim at Spud Meeting on Monday Night

There were only about a dozen or fifteen present at the interesting and instructive program given by the potato ear men at the court house Monday evening. H. O. Werner, horticulturist of the state agricultural college, gave a talk, illustrated by stereopticon views, on seed selection and various diseases of potatoes, such as Fusarium wilt, common scab, dry rot, etc., and treatment for the prevention of these diseases. He also discussed handling and storage. The views showed results of seed selecting and treatment of potatoes grown in this locality and the Platte valley and different kinds of storage cellars.

H. B. Meinhardt, supervisor of the refrigeration service of the Burlington then gave a demonstration of the proper method of loading potatoes, using a small model refrigerator car loaded with tiny sacks for illustration. He showed how the potatoes should be loaded in sacks to secure the maximum circulation of air in warm weather and the best results from heater service during cold weather. W. C. Andrews, chief of the bureau of markets and marketing, explained briefly the Nebraska grading law and proper handling of spuds.

These men were in Alliance Monday with a special potato exhibit car, which was open to the public and was visited by a number of potato growers during the day. The car is at Hemingford today and Wednesday, and will be at Marland Thursday and Belmont Friday.

There are people in hot weather with so little faith in their own thermometer that they have to look at the thermometer before they will believe it.

Mrs. John Krause Brings Suit to Set Aside Divorce Decree

A fight for the $500,000 estate of the late John Krause, potash magnate has been begun in district court at Omaha by Helen Krause who claims to be his widow, says the Omaha Bee.

She alleges that he obtained a divorce decree in the Douglas county district court by fraud in 1915 and that she never knew the decree had been signed until October 1, 1920. Krause died August 19, 1919 at Alliance, Neb., and his mother Augustie, died a few weeks later.

They were married in Denver in 1912 by Rev. John E. Hummond formerly of Omaha and went to live on Krause's ranch in Sheridan county, Nebraska.

She says he began divorce proceedings in Omaha December 29, 1914 and that the decree granted the following May was void for the alleged reasons that he obtained service by publication on the affidavits that he did not know her residence at the time that his allegations of cruelty and desertion were without foundation and that neither of them was a legal residence of Douglas county. She says he gave her name in the divorce suit as Nellie Krause.

Herman J. Krause and Frank Krause brothers of the deceased are defendants in the suit. The former is executor of the estate.

She asks that the divorce decree be set aside. This would make her sole heir.

Someone will win the 48-lb sack and the 25-lb. sack of flour Saturday at W. E. Cutts'. 91
