RANDOM SHOTS

A bit of cheering news for the conductor of this column comes by way of a postcard from the self-confessed imitator of Abe Martin, who lives at Bridgeport and keeps his identity a secret, but otherwise is apparently a normal human. Abe Martin II promises to contribute more or less regularly in the future, provided the wife doesn't act up and the children keep their health.

It's a mighty mean man who'd steal a good joke from a competitor. Otherwise we'd tell the story which ends: "Hey, missus, look at yer boy!"—Advertisement.

A circular addressed to the "Financial Editor" brings the news that there was a large Portland cement output in September. Details concerning the "solid ivory" harvest are not at hand, but reports are that much of it still ungarnered.

Now that the Ku Klux Klan has put Atlanta, Ga., on the map, and shown the Georgians how easy it is to get free advertising, a lot of Atlanta firms are doing their best to get by with some of that stuff. The Georgia Railway and Power company have put us on their list and this morning we get a lot of interesting dope showing how prosperity is returning to Atlanta. The cotton crop has matured about twenty days early; building permits are looking up; they're building roads and bridges; fall buying is brisk, and the crop of yams has never been better, this year's yield being estimated at 14,392,000 bushels.

It's a privilege to live in Georgia. Even if you don't exactly approve of the Ku Klux Klan, no thinking man can have anything to say against the yam crop.

Deep Stuff.

Angelina—Don't tell me you haven't been kissing other girls.
Al—Why, I never.
Angelina—Yes, you have. One of your yumyum letters to me was delivered by mistake to the girl next door.

For the best diagram of this joke, showing the point clearly, which reaches this office by 6 p. m. Saturday, a prize of one slightly used typewriter ribbon (Remington) will be awarded. The joke is not the best in the world, but neither is the prize.

Ole Buck: A Harvard man says when he dies he wants bankers for pall bearers. He says the bankers have carried him so long he wants them to finish the job.

The linotype operator on the Sidney (Ia.) Herald recently took unto himself a wife, and this is the way in which the editor offered his good wishes. It's intelligible to printers and interesting to ordinary mortals:

"May your sorts stacker always work properly, may never a wrong font come down the channel, may your lines always be cast true and stand on their feet; may you always keep an eye on the elevator and our final wish is that your distributor work freely, that your assembler will continue to gather in nicely without 'pi' and that you get a slug of prosperity and happiness for aye."

Another Subscription Argument.

"My friend," said the inquisitive person, "I see you have an armful of old newspapers."

"Your eyes do not deceive you, sir," replied the shabby citizen.

"Ahem! What do you get out of them?"

"Heat, sir. I sleep under 'em."

It must be simply maddening to the Alliance T. P. A.'s to discover that the esteemed State Journal, led astray by the use of the word "post" in the dispatch sent in by their correspondent, should give the Alliance American Legion credit for putting on the big wild duck feed last Saturday.

The Sunshine Kid brings up a good point for theological discussion when he asks: "If there ain't no cats in heaven, where do they get the strings for the harps?"

A workingman, one of the fellows who drew big wages during the war, was overheard offering to trade three silk shirts for a flannel one. It's going to be a cold winter.

Abe Martin II.

Though Mrs. Maybelle Gidley continues to get up husband Kin's meals for him—and Maybelle is a good cook—yet, owing to what is hoped is only a temporary coolness, she's just at present, like the sample copies that come through the mails, under separate, do not apprehend Maybelle's going permanently on the single list—just wait till winter comes and the weather gets what you might call cold.

Said Uncle Si Huff at the blacksmith shop yiste'day: "Years ago there was a rhyme that ran like this:

"Leaves have their times to fall, And likewise so have I; The reason, too's, the same— It comes o' getting' dry. But there's this difference 'twixt the leaves and me:"

"And, boys, I've clean forgot the rest of the inspired verse; can't think any more what the difference is. But, Si sighed, "I don't know's there's much difference in these days, anyhow."

Abe Mooker wanted to know which letter of the alphabet is used most and which least. Johnny Gidley, of the third grade, as he passed by to school replied, "The answer's E-Z." As the small boy turned the corner, Abe looked after him and remarked, bewildered-like, "Well, I wonder!"

Mr. Brown, of South Dakota, was in Bridgeport between trains, this week, on his way to visit Mr. Smith, of Colorado.

"It is always a matter of consternation and concern with me," said former Prof. Eliot Herring, "to read a presumed quip that has two, three or more possible points, but which, on the other hand, I am disposed to suspect hasn't even one point."

"I wouldn't mind helpin' the wife do the weekly washin'," said Napoleon Muzzy yeste'day, "if it wasn't that just as I think I can go down town she always speaks up and says, "Now the bluing-water."

Harry Thiele sells a cough syrup that is certainly a gogetter for coughs and colds, calls it Thiele's Mentholated Syrup of White Pine with Tar. Just ask for Thiele's Cough Syrup, they'll know what you want.

Tanlac has been an unflinching source of comfort to millions throughout the length and breadth of this continent. Have you tried it for your troubles? F. E. Holsten.

Washington reports that the cost of living has declined 21 per cent in a year. If they were able to get into touch with that, Mars ought to be easy.

ELLSWORTH.

(Too Late for Last Issue.)
T. B. Shrewsbury, road overseer for district No. 40, announces that he has something like five hundred dollars road funds to spend on some of our many "fine spots" and that work will start Tuesday morning, the coal shed and Shrewsbury hill to be fixed first. After this is done there will be no impassable places between Ellsworth and Lakeside and outside of these places the roads are in fair condition, although this has been the longest period without rain and that is an essential for the keeping in condition of sandhill roads.

An extra gang consisting of mostly Greek laborers is assisting the local section forces in work on the Burlington road bed, laying new ties and aligning track before the bad winter weather sets in. There are about fifty men in the extra gang.

Foster Johnson shipped six loads of cattle to Chicago markets Monday. T. B. Shrewsbury also shipped a car of cattle to the St. Joseph market.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Wightman entertained at progressive whist Saturday evening, the usual jolly good bunch being present. The grand prize for the gentlemen was received by J. L. Young with a fifty-seven score, and with the ladies, Mrs. F. J. Ellsbury obtained the grand prize with a long lead of sixty-five points while in the free-for-all, C. L. Murphy was the lucky one. The good time was immensely enjoyed by all until a late hour after which dainty refreshments were served and the guests departed not before many and earnest expressions of their enjoyment of a well and pleasantly spent evening.

An optimist is a man who believes the flies are looking for a way to get out.

Modern detectives are learning to look in the skyscrapers for the man higher up.
