THE PARSON'S CORNER

By Rev. B. J. Minort, Pastor of the First Baptist Church, Alliance

FINDING FAULT.

In Luke 9:54 we read that John the disciple came to Jesus one day and complained that the disciples of John the Baptist were doing the same work that Christ and his disciples were doing, but they were not following the methods that Christ and his followers did. This fault finder was so enthusiastic for "the cause" that he became a volunteer defender of "the faith," to the extent of being willing to call down fire upon the men who did the same kind of work he was doing. He asked Christ for the privilege of calling down fire.

John, in this case, represents a large class of men who cannot see a thing done in a different way from what they do it, without finding fault. They lay more stress on methods than upon results. We live in a day of results; in a day when men are expecting us to "put it across" and have little time to quibble over methods.

Now, why did John find fault with the disciples of the Baptist, who, according to John's words, were doing good, but who did it in a different way from Christ? It was not that John the Baptist was not doing good, or not preaching the Gospel, but that he did it in a different way. Now this critic's tribe has not all died out, yet perhaps it would be a blessing if they had. We have them with us. Let a man get away from the old beaten path, whether it be religious, or in other work, and a storm of protest arises from every quarter where the followers of John exist.

The cold fact is that every man who has made his mark in this world has, as a rule, been a man who has departed from some old foggy, mossback, laid out road that has brought men nowhere. Young man, you who are just beginning in life, may I point out to you a rule of life that has brought numberless blessings to the writer, and that has "put it across" in many ways?

Listen, instead of whining about the success of your competitor, find out his weak points, and capitalize them, not by being personal, but by filling in the gap he leaves open. Say little about it, but get busy and work as hard as you can to supply the need that by his neglect is created, and you will come out ahead of him every time. This has brought thousands of men to the top rung of the ladder. In the ministry this rule has never failed. This is what has brought Dr. Matthews, pastor of the First Presbyterian church of Seattle, who is preaching to more people than any other man in that denomination, and whose church is one of the outstanding churches in the country. The same is true of Dr. Russel Conwell, who preaches to nearly ten thousand people every Sunday.

Billy Sunday became a world renowned man. How? By capitalizing the failures of the preachers of the country. D. L. Moody became great by the same rule. God will invariably bless the man who will use the good points of his competitor, and make the competitor's mistakes or failures, instead of objects of criticism stepping stones to higher attainments.

Custom of Taking the Grist to Mill Is Being Revied

Scottsbluff Star-Herald: It is not so many years ago, as time is reckoned, that it was the rule to bundle a lad on the hurricane deck of an old horse, along with a sack of wheat and send him to mill. He returned with flour enough for the family bread for a couple of weeks to come. It was all very simple, and worked splendidly, despite the old saw, "don't send a boy to mill."

In some sections of the country this old custom is being renewed, the millers taking their toll as of old and in return sending the "boy" home with an excellent brand of flour. The farmer is satisfied, and so is the miller, so everybody seems united, save perhaps the railroads.

In last week's issue of the Hay Springs News is an item which calls attention to the fact that many of the farmers in that region are taking their wheat to a mill at Pine Creek. One of the Hay Springs citizens stated that he had 500 pounds of fine flour as the result of his trip to mill, and also averred that while he was there five truck loads of wheat arrived from Alliance, and that trade was commencing to pour in from the Chadron neighborhood.

Antioch Man Catches Eighty-Three Coyotes Since Last November

Earl Ferguson, hunter and trapper living at Antioch, has caught eighty-three coyotes since the first cold weather last November. Mr. Ferguson so far this winter hasn't done any trapping, but has caught all the coyotes with three half Stags, half Russian-wolf hounds that he raised himself. He says they are the best hounds in the country, and judging from their showing, he's probably right.

Mr. Ferguson hasn't yet sold any of the pelts, but expects to ship them about the middle of January, when the market will probably be higher. He has been offered five dollars each for them, but expects to get from seven to ten dollars when he sells. By sending the scalps to the county seat at Rushville, he would receive three dollars apiece bounty, but cutting the scalps off would probably reduce the value of the hides more than the the bounty would amount to.

TOTALLY OBSCURED.

A certain callow Chicago swain had an amazingly large mouth which he contorted into an all-pervading smile when he wished to make a good impression. His sweetie had persuaded him to "ask father" and the youth was determined to show himself to good advantage. "Mister Jones," he began, stretching his principal feature to the utmost of geniality. "I have come to ask for the hand of your daughter. I—" "Just a moment, young man," interrupted the old gentleman mildly, "would you mind closing your mouth for a moment till I see who you are."

A WARM TRIBUTE.

The business man-mayor of a small city had been elected for his fourth term. Though he had wanted the chance to give all his attention to business, he greeted the announcement committee with as much cordiality as he could master.
"I'm mighty sorry, Mr. Mayor," said the chairman, "but they've put you to the trouble of officiating for another term. A far worse man would have been good enough for us, but that's just the trouble. We couldn't find him—and it's my opinion he ain't to be found."
