THE PUBLIC FORUM

(Editorials by Our Readers.)

A RIFT (?) IN THE CLOUDS.

ALLIANCE, Neb., April 13.—To the Editor of the Herald: Not to prolong the controversy, but to make one or two points clearer: First, the most serious point is where our informers seem to be at variance. I have reinterviewed three men who attended the Remington meeting, and one says the meeting had adjourned, the other said it had not; but both claim that the vote taken was a straw vote. So I am willing to give The Herald reporter the benefit of the doubt.

Another statement that introduces a new element in the case, namely: "The whole effort to get votes was by stirring up prejudice of one kind and another, by promising the east siders a better school; and promising to work for the discharge of a member of the faculty." The latter is a very serious charge, and I have so far found none who confess their guilt of such act. Personally, I heard no one mention these things, but of course I was at the meeting called but about three minutes, so I can only speak of what happened in that short time.

I am glad that The Herald has so far looked at the farmer-labor bloc as a purifying influence in politics. In this respect, The Herald and the writer agree heartily. This as to the phrase, "We will work for the best lineup of candidates, and quite a number have promised to file when the proper time comes," used in my previous communication. I am glad to explain what was meant. It referred to about ten people of the two leading parties who have expressed themselves as considering filing for various offices; but all but one are not railmen, and several of whom are business men, and so far as I know are in good standing in their respective parties.

Now, you may note that I am not using the term "civic forum" today, because the farm-labor bloc is but one phase of the work we are trying to do through the forum. The forum, as we organized it, is not a political organization, but politics will at times be a very prominent part of its work around elections. At other times we hope to interest ourselves in any questions that are of current interest. At one time it may be politics; at another it may be some other phase of community problems. We had hoped it would act as a buffer between the Commercial club and the railmen and farmers, until all the so-called differences are removed. Having accomplished this, if it ever will, we certainly will be willing to withdraw from the scene as individuals or as an organization.

This brings me to the chamber of commerce questions. First, let us understand one another. This feeling that exists between the farmer, the railman and the chamber of commerce is not something new. It existed for several years. This I have read in The Herald some time ago, and have heard from both sides tell of it.

As to the plan that was suggested, it was very simple indeed, consisting of nothing more than calling a meeting some Saturday evening, with light refreshments, at which talks by representatives be made on various phases of community co-operation, and that the railmen be given a chance to state their objections to the chamber of commerce, and the latter likewise explain whether any ground really exists for some of these beliefs or prejudices, both sides discussing the matter in a friendly fashion. No charge was to be made for the refreshments, and should these so-called differences not be wholly removed, to have another meeting called at which time further consideration be made.

Of course, when this suggestion was made I knew nothing of the prejudices that were supposed to exist between the farmers and that organization. Being new in the field, I felt that if the railmen and the business men really got together on all community questions we would have a better town, and certainly a happier people.

I had not entered into the labor question as yet, and really spoke as an honorary member of the chamber. The great question at that time was a belief that the local club was a member of the United States chamber of commerce. This, I was told, was not the case. But I thought if the men were given the chance in a meeting of that kind to state the reasons they believed this, a long step toward removing this feeling would have been taken. At several talks before the club I stated as a man just come to the field that the greatest trouble, as I saw it, with the chamber was that it had apparently ignored a very large class in its work. My sentiment at that time was seconded by a very prominent member of the club, in the following words, as near as I can remember: "Gentlemen, I also believe that we have blundered as an organization in the matter of our relation to the large class of railroad men. In my two years of membership in this club I have never heard the railroad men referred to 'ave in a critical spirit until Mr. Minort came, and I favor some move whereby we can show these men that we consider them an important part of our community life." The outcome of that speech was that plans were considered whereby these men could be persuaded to become members of the chamber. The entrance fee, if I remember right, was to be decreased as to railroad men. One of the directors at this stage of the game got up and said that he would be glad to resign if the club saw fit to appoint a railroad man in his place. I am not sure, but I think that Mr. Mallery and myself got up and objected to using this move to get the men into the chamber of commerce. We all felt that we should have some of these men in the club if the friendly feeling that should exist between the two would ever be brought about. And I then suggested that we convince the men, as an organization, that the club really was in sympathy with organized labor and was not guilty of things charged by the men. I felt that so long as the men believe that the club was a branch of the United States chamber of commerce, the effort to develop a better feeling would be useless.

The plan for a long time remained unacted upon. In the meantime, through a desire to learn both sides of the question, I began my work among the men, and got their viewpoint. Again I brought the matter to the attention of the club and the president made a lengthy speech attempting to show that the local club had no connection with the national body. At that meeting, I asked for five minutes to state the reasons why the men believed this to be the case. I was told that I must come up the next week.

The next meeting I was there, and again I was shut off. The next week I tried to get a hearing and to this day I was prevented, and several months ago I gave up trying. All this time the men were anxious to hear what the outcome would be. Surely the removal of this prejudice was worth five minutes of any man's time. I meant the keeping of thousands of dollars here in Alliance. Much of the nail order business would have been done away with. Personally, were I a business man, I would be glad to have met the men in such a meeting, instead of criticism we would have co-operation. B. J. MINORT.

A CENSOR CENSORED

(Omaha World-Herald)

On the various battlefields where movie interests and movie censors fight, the most vigorous engagement is being waged now in the Ohio sector. Mrs. Evelyn Snow, chief of the Ohio censorship board, has been swinging mean shears in the belief that most of the films can be improved by cutting out two-thirds of the rot. It might be interesting to know why the other third is left in.

It soon developed that producer and censor were not dwelling together in what might be called harmony. But to show that the producers thought a great deal of Mrs. Snow, they filmed her at work and prepared the following statements, alleged to have been made by her, to throw on the screen: "The people are not fit to judge for themselves. Seventy-five per cent of the people never think at all."

But again the censor used shears, and Mrs. Snow's picture and the alleged remarks came out. Now the movie company plans to take court action alleging that Mrs. Snow overstepped the law in censoring a piece of news.

It is often that a chance is given to know what censors eliminate. We can only see what they leave in the picture.

The above sample of the alleged censor's remarks would indicate intolerance and bigotry. You and I do not know what we ought to read and see. But the censor knows.

That is the kind of regulating that makes the people think some more. And it is not apt to make them think very kindly toward such censorship.

PROSPERITY ON BILL BOARDS

In a speech recently made in the senate, after reciting his affliction of the country, Senator Harrison compared political promises with actual performances and charged that the present administration is engaged in placarding bill boards in the cities telling the people of the wonderful prosperity prevailing over the country, and then read the following from a republican living in Salt Lake, Utah:

THE BILL BOARD ON THE STREET

Mark Hanna gave the dinner pail That made us feel so fine; Theodore used the big stick To keep us all in line; But Harding, in his great wisdom, Has outdone all his great feats, He's given us prosperity On the billboards on our streets. A quick return to "normalcy" The thing he's striving at, And if we'll tighten up our belts, Some time he'll make us fat.

Instead of the old dinner pail, Full of good things to eat, He'll serve us with prosperity On billboards on the street. For many years I served you As puppet and as tool, But this last stunt has wised me up, No more a silly fool. I may be a poor working man, My clothes are far from neat, But you can't fool me with prosperity On a billboard on the street.

13900 Nebraska Farmers Obtain War Finance Aid

Applications of 13,900 Nebraska farmers and ranchers for loans from the Omaha agency of the War Finance corporation have been acted upon favorably, according to a statement made by F. W. Thomas, regional chairman of the corporation in this territory.

The applications have totaled $69, with an average of 16 farmers' notes in each, Mr. Thomas stated. The majority of these notes are secured by chattel mortgages on growing cattle and hogs, which bids well toward maintaining a steady market on live stock, experts say.

The effect of bringing War Finance funds to Nebraska has resulted in raising the grain and live stock market from 50 to 100 per cent during the last winter. Mr. Thomas said. The total amount of loans since November 1 has reached $14,497,269.00. The War Finance corporation, according to Mr. Thomas, has given especially beneficial service in exporting agriculture products in an endeavor to dispose of surplus products which had a deterrent effect on markets.

Work to Start on New Burlington Shops at Denver

Work will soon start on the new two million dollar shop plant to be built to serve the western lines of the Burlington and the Colorado & Southern at Denver, it is announced. General Manager Thiehoff of Omaha was in Denver the early part of last week and was met there by President Hale Holden and Vice President Burnham. Work on the big shops will start there in about two weeks.

The new shops at Denver have been under contemplation for some time to relieve the pressure on the Havelock shops. At Havelock it has been difficult to maintain a night force and with such an investment in shops some officials are said to feel that when work is rushing the shops should be in use every hour of the day. Denver is regarded as one of the best labor markets in the west and it is believed that it will be easier to maintain forces there.

That doesn't mean, it is said, that the amount of work done in the Havelock shops will be lessened. These shops have been overburdened for a long time. The shops have been unable to meet demands made upon them at rush times.

At one time Alliance and Bridgeport had hopes of securing these shops, but the dream was finished over a year ago.
