Musical Concert Sunday Night at Methodist Church

Mann's concert orchestra, consisting of some fifteen pieces will give a full concert Sunday night at the Methodist church beginning at 8 o'clock, which will be entirely free to the public. The usual collection will be taken, half of which will go to the orchestra. Mr. Mann has been training this orchestra for a year or more and people who have heard them say they know how to make real music. According to a statement made by their director, J. P. Mann, it is their purpose to develop a taste for the better class of music in the community and among young people. The success of their efforts is shown by the fact that they already have among them many of the best musicians of the city and several amateurs have developed the skill to handle difficult music with ease. The public is invited to attend this program.

AT THE IMPERIAL.

Tonight and Saturday Imperial theatre-goers will see the splendid, modernized production of the story, "Ten Nights in a Barroom." Seventy years ago this story was published, and the reform affected by the influence of this greatest of life's stories. The play is a continual study in crime caused by drink, but is relieved by touches of humor, comedy and pathos, and great artistry of background, grouping, and photography, beauty and realism are indeed cleverly contrasted in the picture. There is an all star cast in this picture and you see some of the very finest acting that has ever found its way to the screen. These people act as if to the manner born—there is such house stuff at times; any number of exciting fights; a scene on the rapids of a river, which thrills you by its exciting movement, and many other exciting episodes. It is a picture you will hesitate to miss.

Sunday and Monday noid another special treat for Imperial patrons. Thomas H. Ince presents "Lying Lips" with House Peters and Florence Vidor. From the jeweled-bedecked parlors of London's aristocracy to the sweeping stretches of the great Canadian Northwest. Then back again to London—over a storm swept sea which caught two loving souls in a horrible whirlpool of a hideous fate. The strange love affairs of Nansen Abbott will arouse every heart in the universe. You will go home talking about Thomas H. Ince's great spectacle of life and love, "Lying Lips," and you'll live a happier life for having seen it. Coming to this theatre with a superb all-star cast headed by House Peters, Florence Vidor, Joseph Kilgour, Margaret Livingston and other favorites.

AT THE RIALTO

Tonight's bill at the Rialto features Helman Day's great north woods story "The Rider of the King Log." The character of Kavanaugh, old "X. K.", "The Rider of the King Log," is one of the most virile and picturesque ever created by that master story-teller, Helman Day. You will enjoy seeing his fight against the profit-greedy corporations that attempt to disrupt the smooth, contented life of his little kingdom in Ste. Agathe. The film story is enacted by a splendid cast, including Frank Sheridan, Richard Travers, Irene Boyle, Carleton Brickert and many others.

Saturday matinee and evening you will see "Without Limit," the George D. Baker production, released by Metro. It is an adaptation from the masterpiece of Calvin Johnston which appeared in The Saturday Evening Post recently. This striking picture, in which Anna Q. Nilsson is the featured player, portrays a girl who marries an utter stranger while drunk and who learns of her mistake while in a mysterious gambling palace. Her husband is soon revealed a coward and forger. A great wrench lifts her up when she has all but fallen.

Sunday's program has for its feature picture what is termed as "the strangest story ever screened." "The Other Woman" has an appeal to popular favor through its treatment of the ever-fascinating theme—that of dual personality. It is indeed a strange situation that Langdon Kirvan finds himself in, when he eventually wakes to the realization of the grief he will cause one of two women. See if you would decide as Langdon does.

Monday and Tuesday Rialto patrons will have the pleasure of witnessing a truly notable picture. Vera Gordon, the "mother" of "Humoresque," also has a mother part in "The Greatest Love," and it is said that her portrayal of Mrs. Lantini far exceeds her previous screen efforts. The all-star cast includes also Hugh Huntley, W. H. Tooker, Bartram Marburgh, Donald Hall, as well as three clever child players. It is a picture you will want to see.

ALLIANCE'S CITY MANAGER

(York News-Times)

The city of Alliance claims to be pleased with the plan of having a city manager.

The report sent out from Box Butte county seat says the city expenses have been reduced under the manager plan. There is a scheme on foot for Alliance to pay some of her debts. The city manager of Alliance may be all right. There are numerous small cities in Iowa, where the city manager plan is in vogue; Clarinda is one and the plan there has worked, but it is not claimed the plan is much cheaper than the commission or council system. One thing is sure, it offers one man an opportunity to graft if he so desires. Clarinda and Alliance have been fortunate in getting good men for managers, but there are towns that have had rascals in the position and in these towns the plan is not so popular.

Alliance owns her water works and electric light plant. These are a source of revenue, and with a good business man in control they will pay for themselves eventually. At Sheridan, Wyo., the water works are owned by the city and the plant has been a good source of revenue. At Cheyenne the city has an expensive water works system and the revenues have not been so satisfactory, but in Cheyenne the big debt is gradually being reduced.

Business principles in city management is necessary to secure good service. The one-man system has some good points, but most communities would rather trust a council or a commission.
