Christmas at Sandringham. A friend of the Prince of Wales says that on Christmas morning everybody is wakened at an early hour, and at 7:30 mother and daughters meet in the breakfast room by a big open fire and examine the presents from all over Europe, heaped on a large table. In a few minutes the Prince of Wales and his two sons come in in rough tweed suits and knickerbockers from their morning "appetizer," a brisk walk around the farms. The guests then come in and all sit down to a breakfast robust enough to make lackadaisical imitators stand aghast, and then disperse as suits their

Pretty Favors. Some pretty favors that may be made at home for a dinner, dance or luncheon have as their foundation the flat circular boxes used by confectioners. The boxes should not be more than an inch or an inch and a half high. Their circumference is a matter of taste, though a box of about twelve inches is perhaps the best. Make as many bags of surah or China silk, in bright colors, as you have boxes, and leave the bags open across the bottom. Sew the bottom of the bag around the box on the outside, and over the stitches put a band of satin ribbon the width of the rim of the box. Turn the top of the bag in a hem sufficiently wide to allow of a shirring string. Sometimes the band of ribbon around the box is powdered with tiny painted flowers. One box can be used for two bags, as both the bottom and the cover are of the same size. - New York

JOY AND PAIN.

Upon our heads we pine for Summer's heat; There is no joy without some loss or pain. To take life as we find it is the art Of living well. Ah, let us not forget, Though life be dark today there may be yet, When Summer comes, much joy for each sa heart,

Perhaps God sends us trouble as a test,
To see if it will prove us at our best.

THE ALIBI.

Jem Blake was shot dead in his own doorway by Antonio Gueldo and trial was to come off directly.

The extraordinary interest in peculiar circumstances than to the fact that this was the first case tried at San Saba in any more formal court than the time honored institution of Judge Lynch. As there was no place specially arranged for the trial, Judge Pitblado hospitably offered the use of his shed. Here a rough table and chair were placed for the judge, the other necessary furniture, intended to represent the dock, the stand, etc., being eked out with boxes from Silas Bagget's grocery store.

Jake Smith looked at these preparations for a time with frowning discontent and then strolled down the road, turning into the lane that led to Blake's. When he reached the door of the shanty he leaned against the jamb and poked his naked head inside, fanning hanself in an embarrassed way with his greasy fragment of a hat. He had come there with the intention of saying something. but the sight within made him forget it. Blake's widow sat there, as she had der, staring straight before her, with mitted. struck through the foliage of the red oak trees that grew before the door, and

There it was, just as it had been three days ago (could it be only three days?)just as it had been when she went out that morning to look after the drying clothes and left him standing in the door by the cradle (how fond he was of the baby!)-just as it was when she heard the crack of the pistol and ran in with an awful sense of suffocating frightjust the same as when she had found him lying upon the cradle, dabbling its white linen with his blood and the baby playing with his hair. She screamed playing with his hair. She screamed where the jury was deliberating.

Antonio's lawyer, a sharp eyed, sharp featured fellow from Galveston, had bustled about with surprising agility on the day previous, holding mysterious conferences with ill conditioned fellows of Gueldo's kidney. The court was assembled, the jury had been chosen, and the witnesses were all present save one-Blake's widow. Pretty soon there was a stir at the door, then a murmur of surprise ran through the crowded room. blue eyes open to their fullest extent, entirely absorbed in the novel scene, save at the moment when that irresistible glitter caught its eye. Every one being now present, the trial went on in good earnest. A number of witnesses were examined, whose testimony showed that Gueldo had had trouble with Blake, and more than once threatened his life; that Gueldo's pistol was one charge empty on the evening of the day of the murder, whereas in the morning it had been full; that he was seen that morning around Blake's house but was none the less sure for that. There had been a rumor about that some one had heard Antonio make a boast of "having done for Blake this time," but if there were a witness for this he could not be found now. And so the prosecution closed.

The Galveston lawyer began by in-volving in a whirlpool of helpless contradiction the witness who had sworn to having seen Gueldo near Blake's house. Then he expatiated on the ease with which one person may be mistaken for another, and brought a witness to show how Gueldo had already been said to resemble some one in the village. Finally he produced three of the ill conditioned fellows before referred to, who swore that Antonio was with them on a hunting expedition during the whole of the pretty much all the time since the mur- day on which the murder was com-

It was a clear case of alibi. Jack Smith's astonishment at the ease with which the thing had been accomplished checkered with the flickering brightness was unbounded. He threw a disgusted the floor and cradle in which Jem's baby look toward Pitblado, but the judge was nonplussed and didn't seem to be interested with things in Jake's vicinity.

"Gentlemen of the jury," said he, "the verdict took a turn I didn't altogether expec'. I don't know as there's much to be said. I s'pose you've got to go by the evidence, an that don't need any explainin. Ef you kin make out, accordin ter that, that Antonio Gueldo doubly aged. It is more wholekilled Jem Blake, why, jest recollect that's what yer here fur."

Antonio talked and laughed in an unwidow sat staring at them with com-Jake Smith was trying to find the link spokesman, and Judge Pitblado rose, around here too long." There was a dead pause, during which nobody moved. Jake Smith exploded a single cuss word which he had held in for some time past, and Blake's widow stood up. "Have you got through, judge," she

"Waal-I-s'pose so." "And there is nothing else to be done?" "I am afraid there ain't."

"And he's free to go?" "Y-a-s." Antonio Gueldo arose with an insolent grin and picked up his hat. The baby crowed, for it saw the glittering thing again.

There was a sharp report-Antonio pitched forward in a heap upon the floor and Blake's widow stood with the pistol pressed to her breast. A line of thin blue smoke curled from the muzzle of the weapon and formed a halo around the child's flaxen head. Musical Animals.

A lady was showing little Zaidee some pictures of birds, among which was a nightingale. The lady told Zaidee that it was a bird which sang beautifully in the night, adding, "We have no nightingales in this country, as they have in England." "No," replied Zaidee promptly, "but we have cats that sing in the night. I often hear them."-New York
