IN THE JURY'S HANDS.

Counsel in the Borden Murder Trial Close Their Arguments.

HER LIFE IN THE BALANCE.

District Attorney Knowlton Sums Up For the State—Judge Dewey's Charge to the Jury Favorable to the Defendant.

New Bedford, June 20.—At the opening of court there was as many people in the room as at any time during the session. Among the peculiarities of the morning was the receipt of a box by Governor Robinson, sent from Pennsylvania, in which was a handless hatchet. The true inwardness of the gift was not apparent and the box was not removed from the janitor's room. Court came in at 9 o'clock promptly and District Attorney Knowlton resumed his argument. He said: "Because the lips of those who do not know are sealed in death we do not know but that some new phase had come up in the family life, adding to the feeling of malice and jealousy existing in this woman. No suggestion could be made by that poor man as in favor of his wife but would fan the flames into an unquenchable fire. There may be that one man always who would know who killed his wife and when she came down stairs, she came to meet Nemesis. He knew too much of the family relations and she did not dare to let him live. The second murder was not planned, but was done as a wicked and fearful necessity. Mr. Knowlton reviewed at length the evidence as to the handless hatchet and discussed its bearing on the case. The prisoner watched him fixly during his argument. The prosecutor, briefly, but powerfully summarized his entire argument, claimed that the evidence of the defense amounted to nothing, and closed at 2:15 with an eloquent appeal to the jury to decide as their consciences should dictate. The court then took a recess until 1:45. At 1:45 the court resumed its session, and the defendant was given an opportunity to speak. She said: "I am innocent, but I will have my case in your hands and with any counsel." Judge Dewey then charged the jury. He told them to disregard the previous hearings and defend the different degrees of murder. He stated the assumption of innocence which was made by the defendant's character. There must be a real and operative motive. The jury then retired.

A STRANGE CRIMINAL CASE.

A Life Convict and His Supposed Victim Meet in the Penitentiary. GALVESTON, Tex., June 20.—The strangest case on record in the history of criminal law in Texas has just come to light. On Dec. 12, 1892, Peter Meggs was convicted at Anderson, Grimes county, on purely circumstantial evidence, of the murder of Michael Ferry, being sentenced to a life term in the state penitentiary at Huntsville. Two or three months after his arrival there Ferry bobbed up in western Texas, where he was arrested for committing a felony, tried and convicted and sentenced to a short term in the same penitentiary where his supposed slayer was confined. The men recognized each other immediately, but Ferry, being legally dead, cannot testify in behalf of Meggs, and the latter, being a convict, cannot testify in his own behalf.
