The disputed boundary is a fair subject for arbitration, but there orchard sent his men to pick the fruit. It was to be sent to the World's fair, and he followed them out among the trees to see that the work was properly done. When at last the apples were packed in the barrels, the fruitgrower decided that those two barrels should again until on the exhibition table in the Horticultural building at the fair. The under construction in the vicinity of red apples were to go east, and the yellow apples were to go west. The golden fruit was loaded into a steamer and started toward the Suez canal, while the red fruit was started the same day in a vessel across the Pacific ocean. The fruit grower marked "No delay. Perishable goods," conspicuously on each barrel. Human Nature Is Queer. Next to the first pronounced hoopskirt on Broadway the first straw hat of the season creates the largest attention. When a man has confidence enough in the weather to start out for a two days' trip with a straw hat, he is planning a great responsibility upon the weather bureau, which stands for our modern providence. I saw such a man at the Fifth Avenue hotel one day, and his was the first straw hat of the season. To say that he attracted much attention and was the subject of a great many pleas-antries is putting it very mildly. There are some people, however, who are either indifferent to criticism or too obtuse to observe it, who begin things without consulting other people. Somebody has to begin, you know, but the large majority of mankind lack the nerve of woman-kind and dread to be conspicuous in any particular as to dress. Men are awful cowards when it comes to dress. They wait for those of better nerve and then follow like a flock of sheep. Scarcely a man of all those who smiled and sneered and laughed at the man with the first straw hat but will be wearing a straw hat himself this summer. Yet if all men were like these no such thing as the comfortable straw would have ever been worn, because no man would have had the courage to begin it. There is a certain humor in the incongruity of things, it is true, and if a man appear on Broadway in straw hat Leave orders at Streitz's Drug Store. and ulster be is likely to be a sensation -at this season of the year. A month or two later and the man with the overcoat and straw may be seen at any summer resort .- New York Herald.

Narrowky Escaped Burial Alive. Mrs. Sara Meade has arrived home 'rom Muskogee, I. T., where she was salled by the supposed death of her son, Al Mende of this city, who was struck by lightning. Al is about 28 years of age. He is a painter and a few weeks ago accepted employment on a government contract about 20 miles from Muskogee, . T. While engaged at work inside a rouse an electrical storm came up, and a flash of lightning descended through a lue near which he was at work, destroyng the furniture in the room and fell ng him senseless to the floor. His body was rendered stiff as in death, and he was very badly burned on the right side. The hair was burned from his head and the flesh blistered down to his foot. His ankle was burned through, and his shoe posed by all to have been killed and showed no evidence of life whatever. Five hours later be had been put in a wagen and was being taken to an un-
