

Makes More
Makes Whiter
Makes Better

Than any other Flour
Manufactured.

HARRINGTON
& TOBIN,
Agents for Western Nebraska.

Ask your grocer to buy it of us.
Notice the brand, and if you use
Minnesota Flour, take no other.

LEGAL NOTICES.

In the matter of the estate of George A. Newman, deceased.
Notice is hereby given that the creditors of said deceased will meet the administrator of said estate to file their claims, County Judge of Lincoln county, Nebraska, in the county court room in said county on the 7th day of June, 1904, and on the 7th day of July, 1904, at one o'clock p. m. each day for the purpose of presenting their claims for examination, adjustment and allowance. Six months are allowed for creditors to present their claims, and one year for the administrator to settle said estate from the 7th day of February, 1904. This notice will be published in the NORTH PLATTE TRIBUNE newspaper for four weeks successively, on and after February 7th, 1904. JAMES M. STANT, County Judge.

NOTICE FOR PUBLICATION.

Land Office at North Platte, Neb., February 19th, 1904.
Notice is hereby given that the following named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof to support his claim, and that said proof will be made before Register and Receiver at North Platte, Neb., on April 21st, 1904. J. H. DICKER, widow of John H. Dicker, deceased, who made Homestead Entry No. 12,547 for the southeast quarter section 24, township 15 north, range 12 west. He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon and cultivation of said land: John J. Berger, Lester Walker, John Boyer and William H. Hester, all of North Platte, Neb. A. S. BALDWIN, Register.

U. P. TIME TABLE.

GOING EAST.	DEPT.	12:30 A. M.
No. 4—Atlantic Express	12:30 A. M.	12:30 A. M.
No. 4—Chicago Express	1:30 A. M.	1:30 A. M.
No. 4—Yankton Mail	2:30 A. M.	2:30 A. M.
No. 2—Limited	3:30 A. M.	3:30 A. M.
No. 2—Freight	4:30 A. M.	4:30 A. M.
No. 2—Overnight	5:30 A. M.	5:30 A. M.

CRIMES & WILCOX,

ATTORNEYS-AT-LAW,
NORTH PLATTE, NEBRASKA.
Office over North Platte National Bank.

H. CHURCH,
LAWYER,
NORTH PLATTE, NEBRASKA.
Office: Hiram Block, Spruce Street.

D. R. N. F. DONALDSON,
Assistant Surgeon United States Army
and Member of Pension Board.
NORTH PLATTE, NEBRASKA.
Office over Straits' Drug Store.

W. M. EVES, M. D.,
PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON,
NORTH PLATTE, NEBRASKA.
Office: Neville's Block. Diseases of Women and Children a Specialty.

CENTRAL MARKET

F. M. HECK, Prop.
DEALER IN ALL KINDS OF

Fresh, Salted and Smoked
MEATS.

Hams, Bacon, Fresh Sausage, Poultry, Eggs, Etc.
Cash Paid for Hides and Furs.
Your patronage is respectfully solicited and we will aim to please you at all times.

CLAUDE WEINGAND,

DEALER IN
Coal Oil, Gasoline,
Crude Petroleum and Coal Gas Tar.

Leave orders at Evans' Book Store.

NORTH PLATTE Marble Works.

W. O. RITNER,
Manufacturer of and Dealer in
Monuments, Headstones,
Curbing, Building Stone,
And all kinds of Monumental and Cemetery Work.
Careful attention given to lettering of every description. Jobbing done on short notice. Orders solicited and estimates freely given.

E. B. WARNER,
Funeral Director.

AND EMBALMER.
A full line of first-class funeral supplies always in stock.
NORTH PLATTE, NEBRASKA.
Telephone orders promptly attended to.

The storehouses and granaries are full and the bank vaults are crowded with too much idle money to permit the prolongation of the present depression in business. If the politicians will let the people know just what they can expect in the future the times will grow better in spite of all legislation.

Seven years have passed since Nebraska suffered a severe blizzard. During that time it has been visited by terrific snow and wind storms. Nebraska can no longer be designated the home of the blizzard. In fact the climate of this state is nowhere excelled.

Joseph T. Dory, of Warsaw, Ill., was troubled with rheumatism and tried a number of different remedies but says none of them seemed to do him any good; but finally he got hold of one that speedily cured him. He was much pleased with it, and felt sure that others similarly afflicted would like to know what the remedy was that cured him. He states for the benefit of the public that it is called Chamberlain's Pain Balm. For sale by A. F. Streitz and North Platte Pharmacy.

The two reasons for democrats favoring the income tax are, first, they have got to have the money, and second, it is like England, you know. England has dictated the "reform in tariff," and why not a tax on incomes? The income tax is not popular in England, but nevertheless it is a failure.

The fact that 30,000 wool growers of the west have forwarded a protest to Washington against the free wool provision of the tariff bill suggests the idea that these same farmers should have made their protests against a possible free wool contingency at the ballot box in November, 1892. The farmers of the west were among the people who demanded a change in the administration policy of the government. Perhaps they believed the change would only affect the other fellows.

How's This!
We Offer One Hundred Dollars Reward for any case of Catarrh that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure.
F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, O.

The undersigned have known F. J. Cheney for the last 15 years, and believe him perfectly honest in all his business transactions and financially able to carry out any obligation made by him. WEST & THURM, Wholesale Druggists, Toledo, O. WALKER, KINNEY & MANVIX, Wholesale Druggists, Toledo, O.

Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. Price 75c per bottle. Sold by all Druggists. Testimonials free.

Representative Morse, of Massachusetts, estimates the shrinkage of values of property, and actual losses to workmen because of the free trade policy of Cleveland, at $15,000,000. Rather a high price to pay for the sweet boon of Grover Cleveland!

The trans-Atlantic steamboat lines of the continent of Europe have formed a big pool for their trans-Atlantic passenger trade earnings, and are negotiating to pool also the earnings of their freight business. The British steamship Co. are likely to conclude also an agreement with the continental lines in order to diminish competition.

Mr. Albert Favorite, of Arkansas City, Kan., wishes to give our readers the benefit of his experience with colds. He says "I contracted a cold early last spring that settled on my lungs, and had hardly recovered from it when I caught another that hung on all summer and left me with a hacking cough which I thought I never would get rid of. I had used Chamberlain's Cough Remedy some fourteen years ago with much success, and concluded to try it again. When I had got through with one bottle my cough had left me, and I have not suffered with a cough or cold since. I have recommended it to others, and all speak well of it. 50 cent bottles for sale by A. F. Streitz and North Platte Pharmacy.

UNITED PACIFIC LAND AGENT,

I. A. FORT,
Has 200,000 acres of U. P. R. R. land for sale on the town of Call and see him if you want a bargain.

GEO. NAUMAN'S

SIXTH STREET
MEAT MARKET.

Meats at wholesale and retail. Fish and Game in season. Sausage at all times. Cash paid for Hides.

Rheumatism, Nervous Diseases and Asthma

CANNOT BE CURED without the aid of ELECTRICITY.

We do not sell the apparatus, but rent. CURE GUARANTEED. Send for further information to

P. A. LEONARD & CO.,
Madison, Wis.

—Dr. Salisbury, the painless dentist, may be found at Dr. Longley's office on the third Monday and the following Tuesday of each month, and will attend his visit as much longer as business justifies.

A MAIDEN'S LIPS.

One day when Mother Nature
Was in a pleasant mood
She called about her Youth and Health
And others of her brood.
"My children, ye have fashioned,
With all the arts we know,
The rose and all the fairest flowers
That in our garden grow."
"But I'm not satisfied, dear,
I have within my heart
The image of a fairer flower,
That calls for all our thought,
Your skill and aid I need,
You, Joy, and I, Melody,
And Beauty, Youth and Sunshine too,
Come, now, and toll with me."

Long time they toiled, Dame Nature
And all her offspring too,
Their hearts and souls were in their task,
And fast the flower grew.
Now laughter smoothed and curved
And brightened up some little spot
Her cheek.

And Health and Youth and Sunshine
Their tribute dutifully paid,
Till Mistress Nature took her turn,
And then the flower was made!
"There's not so sweet," cried Nature,
"A flower the wild bee sips,
Will name itself."
Was called—a maiden's lips.
—Boston Traveller.

SHE WAS PRETTY.

I had stated my intention of going to see Miss Kitty clearly enough, but in doing so I had no very fixed idea as to what I should do when I did see her, and in fact I was entirely surprised by the whole situation.

I determined to retire to my hammock and think over matters in general. As I lay there, swinging lightly over the water, and with the distant sound of the weir lulling my senses pleasantly, it is not to be wondered at that I fell into dreamy reverie.

Old half forgotten recollections came thronging upon me; of little flaxen haired Kitty, whom I used to torment with laughingly asked to be my little wife, nearly a dozen years ago, when she was a little child 10; of her father, my old friend John Dobson, who used to say in his sober business way, "And so she shall be, Mildenhall, if I can help you, and you care to have her when she is grown up"; of that quaintly touching clause in poor Dobson's will by which he had done all that lay in his power to help me.

And I, engaged in turning over money in my hand that I managed to get hold of and shake as heartily as I could.

"You see that I have lost no time in coming down to see you, Kitty," I said, holding her hand while, and thinking how the delicate and young girl, who was now a woman, had a chance to learn the first and great commandment in dress, which is not to form her gowns upon what some one else is wearing unless that some one else is excellent in her height, weight, complexion and age.—Chicago Record.

"Yes," said poor Kitty faintly, and trying feebly to get her hand away, but I still held on. "There is something in my heart when you do say to me, 'I want to talk to you about it.'"

"Yes," whispered poor Miss Kitty, still more faintly and with another feeble and futile attempt to draw her hand from mine. "Would not some other thing interest you more?"

"No, my dear," I said. "I would rather do it now. You are a very pretty girl and a very brave and clever one, and you have just saved my life with your money. I really value you very highly, so that you will always hold a very dear place in my heart."

"And so I came to the conclusion"—I couldn't help pausing a moment to enjoy her consternation—"that I will have nothing more to do with you or your hand, however earnestly you may offer it to me"—letting it go last. "I reject you entirely and hand you over to that young villain—whom I hope to call my enemy for the rest of my life—Mr. Bob Trucker."—Temple Bar.

A Long Sleep.

The longest continuous cataleptic sleep in medical records was reported from Germany in the spring of 1892; the patient—a Silesian miner—having remained absolutely unconscious for a period of 4½ months. The doctors in attendance could not report any signs of waking until the end of the period, when it was found that there was something out of the ordinary in the man's slumbers, excepting a complete rigidity of the limbs. One peculiarity which was much commented upon was that, though the man was unconscious, he had the appearance of an extended nap, but his beard remained perfectly stationary and lifeless.—St. Louis Republic.

Bostonian.

Mamma—Now, dear, the doctor's gone, what can I do to amuse you?
Emerson (aged 5, wearily)—If you please, mother, I think I should like to go to sleep and reduce my temperature. (Fact.)—Vogue.

The Mothers' Union.

A great man, speaking lately on education, said there was one question which presented itself, "Are we, by all these gilded words and speaker started some of our children or merely occupying their minds?" Parents cannot delegate their responsibilities—a truism vigorously emphasized of late by head masters of public schools in the character of their early training chiefly devoted to the mother? It was to call forth the great reserve force of mothers' influence that Mrs. Sumner, wife of the bishop of Guildford, and already well known as a gifted writer and speaker, started some 17 years ago her noble work of the Mothers' Union.

First inaugurated in the Westchester diocese, it has spread with marvelous rapidity, and is now being introduced into any parish without clerical sanction) till it now numbers many thousands of members, from highest to lowest in rank, not only in the United Kingdom, but in Australia, New Zealand, Tasmania, Canada and America. The Mothers' union is for all classes, from duchess to peasant, and consists of members and associates.—Florence Moore in London Journal.

Jean Brooks Greenleaf.

Meeting for the first time Mrs. Jean Brooks Greenleaf, the president of the New York State Suffrage association, one of the few in the presence of an individual whose strong influence is accentuated by much kindness of heart. Her features denote energy, her voice is clear and incisive, and she is an overly ready advocate of the cause she so warmly espouses. Mrs. Greenleaf was made president of the State Suffrage association in 1890 and since that time has made unceasing effort to organize the state into county and local societies. During the last year she was elected president of the association, circulated over 8,000 documents.

A Society and Business Woman.

Among the young Washington women with long heads for business is Mrs. Richardson Clover, wife of Lieutenant Clover of the navy. Mrs. Clover is the special admiration of bank officials and business men, who watch with interest her manipulation of the immense property which she inherited from her father and mother. Previous to her marriage she was a high kicking and acrobatic skirts English girlhood.

WOMAN'S WORLD.

DOLL MODELS FOR PARISIAN DRESS-MAKERS TO BE REVIVED.

Entrage in New York—The Tailor's Shirt—Dressmaker—A Society and Business Woman—Mrs. Richardson Clover and Her Servants—Boston's Unemployed Women.

An enterprising west end dressmaker in London has revived an old fashion first introduced into England in the fifteenth century, when fashion plates and fashion papers were unknown. She intends having her new models made up in large sizes, and for this purpose she has had all styles of figures—thin, plump, tall and short, matronly and youthful.

Many years ago, when Paris held, as she does now, the scepter of fashion, the doll models were large dolls made out from that city to all the great cities, one every six months, to announce to the world the new modes. In Florence, the center of all that was sumptuous and beautiful in dress, by whose old costumes many of our present day dress ideas are inspired, the doll was exhibited publicly on the portico of a great central palace on the feast of the ascension, and the famous Venetian beauties and their escorts would realize how they looked as they gazed at the doll in their way back to a glimpse of the new mode.

In Paris today, at the establishments of some of the great costumers, a lady who orders at the cost of a king's ransom, goes specially to see the doll. She may see it and study it made up in doll shaped like herself in figure and modeled after the same type in coloring. But to have the different prevailing modes illustrated in the doll is not to have the doll in itself, as it is, you are too.

"Too late for what?" I asked, trying to sit up and presently succeeding.

"Why, that!" he whispered testily, and nodding his head in a disturbed way in the direction of the young people who were looking on with interest. "You were to have the first say in that sort of thing?"

"So I was," I rejoined, "and I will speak to Kitty at once."

"Good!" said Mr. Dobson, looking much relieved at my reply and calling the young lady. "Come here, Kitty; this gentleman here wants to speak to you. Mr. Mildenhall, Kitty," he explained grimly.

"I don't know what you mean that I managed to get hold of and shake as heartily as I could.

"You see that I have lost no time in coming down to see you, Kitty," I said, holding her hand while, and thinking how the delicate and young girl, who was now a woman, had a chance to learn the first and great commandment in dress, which is not to form her gowns upon what some one else is wearing unless that some one else is excellent in her height, weight, complexion and age.—Chicago Record.

Balloting to the Standard.

Nothing succeeds like success. In Colorado the Young Men's Christian association of Denver hastens to disclaim the charge of having opposed woman suffrage and claims to have aided it. The committee of Livingston, Tennessee county, comes forward with the assurance that it worked for woman suffrage in 1875 and has been pushing it ever since.

This decision was not unexpected. Under the all principle of interpretation the constitutional limitation of the word "male" is considered applicable to all officers specifically named and provided for in the state constitution. The school commissioner is a county officer specified in the state constitution. This decision does not deprive the women of New York state of the right which they have had since 1880 to vote in town and school district elections, nor does it prevent the legislature from extending full municipal suffrage to the women.

The London papers have much to say of "that wonderful little woman, Mrs. Wordsworth," who is teaching skirt dancing to the young of the aristocracy. She is said to be at the present moment teaching 10,000 pupils. Mrs. Wordsworth considers the average English girl wanting in natural grace of movement, and there is little doubt that she will then meet her affectionate grandson, Emperor William.—London Letter.

CAUSE FOR MOURNING.

The Chinese Minister at Washington Weeps and Wails Over a Gas Bill.
The Chinese minister at Washington has been the object of curiosity in Washington, and the mysterious goings on in the famous old Stewart castle, which the Celestials used to inhabit, were a never failing source of wonder and speculation. Now that the legation has a magnificent triple house for its home out on the heights the interest in the inhabitants is still further increased. The Chinese minister is now in Washington, and his legation, so that it read in bold black script, "Old trousers for Miss W.—," a vivine her name in full—Boston Globe.

WORTHY OF CONFIDENCE.

Dempsy's Sporting Partner Didn't Give Notice of His Intended Star Flight.
Jack Dempsy, "the Nonpareil," the winner of 51 prize fights, who finally succumbed to Fitzsimmons, is engaged with a theatrical company to give sporting exhibitions. His partner is Denny Costigan. They are warm friends.

Costigan recently was introduced to some ladies and was anxious to make a good impression. He invited them to the theater, purchased a ticket and had them placed there and confidentially told them to watch him give Dempsy a friendly trouncing.

Dempsy was surprised at Costigan's unusual vigor that night and was pleased at the prospect of giving a lively bout. "Costigan's very strong tonight," murmured Dempsy to his bottle holder after the first round.

WOMAN'S WORLD.

DOLL MODELS FOR PARISIAN DRESS-MAKERS TO BE REVIVED.

Entrage in New York—The Tailor's Shirt—Dressmaker—A Society and Business Woman—Mrs. Richardson Clover and Her Servants—Boston's Unemployed Women.

An enterprising west end dressmaker in London has revived an old fashion first introduced into England in the fifteenth century, when fashion plates and fashion papers were unknown. She intends having her new models made up in large sizes, and for this purpose she has had all styles of figures—thin, plump, tall and short, matronly and youthful.

Many years ago, when Paris held, as she does now, the scepter of fashion, the doll models were large dolls made out from that city to all the great cities, one every six months, to announce to the world the new modes. In Florence, the center of all that was sumptuous and beautiful in dress, by whose old costumes many of our present day dress ideas are inspired, the doll was exhibited publicly on the portico of a great central palace on the feast of the ascension, and the famous Venetian beauties and their escorts would realize how they looked as they gazed at the doll in their way back to a glimpse of the new mode.

In Paris today, at the establishments of some of the great costumers, a lady who orders at the cost of a king's ransom, goes specially to see the doll. She may see it and study it made up in doll shaped like herself in figure and modeled after the same type in coloring. But to have the different prevailing modes illustrated in the doll is not to have the doll in itself, as it is, you are too.

"Too late for what?" I asked, trying to sit up and presently succeeding.

"Why, that!" he whispered testily, and nodding his head in a disturbed way in the direction of the young people who were looking on with interest. "You were to have the first say in that sort of thing?"

"So I was," I rejoined, "and I will speak to Kitty at once."

"Good!" said Mr. Dobson, looking much relieved at my reply and calling the young lady. "Come here, Kitty; this gentleman here wants to speak to you. Mr. Mildenhall, Kitty," he explained grimly.

"I don't know what you mean that I managed to get hold of and shake as heartily as I could.

"You see that I have lost no time in coming down to see you, Kitty," I said, holding her hand while, and thinking how the delicate and young girl, who was now a woman, had a chance to learn the first and great commandment in dress, which is not to form her gowns upon what some one else is wearing unless that some one else is excellent in her height, weight, complexion and age.—Chicago Record.

Balloting to the Standard.

Nothing succeeds like success. In Colorado the Young Men's Christian association of Denver hastens to disclaim the charge of having opposed woman suffrage and claims to have aided it. The committee of Livingston, Tennessee county, comes forward with the assurance that it worked for woman suffrage in 1875 and has been pushing it ever since.

This decision was not unexpected. Under the all principle of interpretation the constitutional limitation of the word "male" is considered applicable to all officers specifically named and provided for in the state constitution. The school commissioner is a county officer specified in the state constitution. This decision does not deprive the women of New York state of the right which they have had since 1880 to vote in town and school district elections, nor does it prevent the legislature from extending full municipal suffrage to the women.

The London papers have much to say of "that wonderful little woman, Mrs. Wordsworth," who is teaching skirt dancing to the young of the aristocracy. She is said to be at the present moment teaching 10,000 pupils. Mrs. Wordsworth considers the average English girl wanting in natural grace of movement, and there is little doubt that she will then meet her affectionate grandson, Emperor William.—London Letter.

CAUSE FOR MOURNING.

The Chinese Minister at Washington Weeps and Wails Over a Gas Bill.
The Chinese minister at Washington has been the object of curiosity in Washington, and the mysterious goings on in the famous old Stewart castle, which the Celestials used to inhabit, were a never failing source of wonder and speculation. Now that the legation has a magnificent triple house for its home out on the heights the interest in the inhabitants is still further increased. The Chinese minister is now in Washington, and his legation, so that it read in bold black script, "Old trousers for Miss W.—," a vivine her name in full—Boston Globe.

WORTHY OF CONFIDENCE.

Dempsy's Sporting Partner Didn't Give Notice of His Intended Star Flight.
Jack Dempsy, "the Nonpareil," the winner of 51 prize fights, who finally succumbed to Fitzsimmons, is engaged with a theatrical company to give sporting exhibitions. His partner is Denny Costigan. They are warm friends.

Costigan recently was introduced to some ladies and was anxious to make a good impression. He invited them to the theater, purchased a ticket and had them placed there and confidentially told them to watch him give Dempsy a friendly trouncing.

Dempsy was surprised at Costigan's unusual vigor that night and was pleased at the prospect of giving a lively bout. "Costigan's very strong tonight," murmured Dempsy to his bottle holder after the first round.

A PHYSICIAN'S STORY.

How the Lady, His Patient, Managed to Keep on With Her Opium.

This story comes from one of our best known physicians. For reasons that are obvious to all, he does not give the name of the woman in question.

"She is a divorcee," the physician said, "and is quite well known in society. She is good looking, clever and rich, but for a long time was addicted to the use of opium. The habit grew so strong that her relatives advised her to go to some sanitarium for treatment. For a long time she refused to do this, but when they threatened to have her committed to an asylum she yielded and came to our treatment."

"She brought a nurse with her—a clever, bright faced girl—whom she paid $50 a week to sit on her. We were all greatly surprised at the days went by to note that she did not seem to be at all depressed, as most people are during the first few weeks of abstinence from the drug. She seemed as bright and as cheerful as on the first day," he said to her once.

"You don't seem to miss your opium."

"No," she said, with a smile. "It did not have such a hold on me as I thought it did."

"One day, after she had been there over a month we discovered by mere accident what kept her so cheerful. One of our attendants caught her in the act of taking opium. When we asked her where she had obtained the drug, she refused at first to tell us, and under duress she told us that she had brought a lot of opium with her."

"The matron searched her room, and when she came to the office to report she was almost speechless with amazement. The woman had hidden half a pound of opium in every conceivable part of all her dresses. There was opium in the sleeves, in the ruffles, in the lace, in the lining and in every pocket. There was opium sewed inside her dresses and placed in another room. She even had opium in the papers which she used to curl her hair."

"It was her maid's duty, we learned, to administer this opium to her in such a way that we would not detect it. The woman had hidden half a pound of opium in the curl papers. Her mistress was relieved of all her suffering and was supplied with new dresses and placed in another room. For several weeks she underwent the depressing experience of all who break off the habit. All her brightness and good nature vanished for a time. She no more cured, however, and is married again."—New York Sun.

The Typical American.

The typical American has all been western men, with the exception, let us say, of Washington. Washington had had much of European culture. The qualities that made him a great commander and a great president were qualities which would have made him an equally great frontiersman. You cannot imagine Hamilton or Madison or Jefferson or Lincoln or Jackson or the Pinckneys living tolerably on the frontier. They are not Americans in the sense in which Clay and Jackson and Lincoln are Americans. We may wish that the typical Americans of the past had had more knowledge, a more cultivated appreciation of the value of what was old and established, a juster view of foreign nations and foreign politics; that they had been more like Webster and less like Jackson, and we may hope that the typical American of the future will be wiser and better poised. But in the meantime the past is to be understood and estimated as the facts stand, and only thoroughly sympathetic comprehension of those men, who have actually been the typical Americans, will enable us to effect that purpose. The fact that Clay rather than Webster, Jackson and not John Quincy Adams, represented the peculiar American culture, the qualities that made him a great commander and a great president were qualities which would have made him an equally great frontiersman. You cannot imagine Hamilton or Madison or Jefferson or Lincoln or Jackson or the Pinckneys living tolerably on the frontier. They are not Americans in the sense in which Clay and Jackson and Lincoln are Americans. We may wish that the typical Americans of the past had had more knowledge, a more cultivated appreciation of the value of what was old and established, a juster view of foreign nations and foreign politics; that they had been more like Webster and less like Jackson, and we may hope that the typical American of the future will be wiser and better poised. But in the meantime the past is to be understood and estimated as the facts stand, and only thoroughly sympathetic comprehension of those men, who have actually been the typical Americans, will enable us to effect that purpose. The fact that Clay rather than Webster, Jackson and not John Quincy Adams, represented the peculiar American culture, the qualities that made him a great commander and a great president were qualities which would have made him an equally great frontiersman. You cannot imagine Hamilton or Madison or Jefferson or Lincoln or Jackson or the Pinckneys living tolerably on the frontier. They are not Americans in the sense in which Clay and Jackson and Lincoln are Americans. We may wish that the typical Americans of the past had had more knowledge, a more cultivated appreciation of the value of what was old and established, a juster view of foreign nations and foreign politics; that they had been more like Webster and less like Jackson, and we may hope that the typical American of the future will be wiser and better poised. But in the meantime the past is to be understood and estimated as the facts stand, and only thoroughly sympathetic comprehension of those men, who have actually been the typical Americans, will enable us to effect that purpose. The fact that Clay rather than Webster, Jackson and not John Quincy Adams, represented the peculiar American culture, the qualities that made him a great commander and a great president were qualities which would have made him an equally great frontiersman. You cannot imagine Hamilton or Madison or Jefferson or Lincoln or Jackson or the Pinckneys living tolerably on the frontier. They are not Americans in the sense in which Clay and Jackson and Lincoln are Americans. We may wish that the typical Americans of the past had had more knowledge, a more cultivated appreciation of the value of what was old and established, a juster view of foreign nations and foreign politics; that they had been more like Webster and less like Jackson, and we may hope that the typical American of the future will be wiser and better poised. But in the meantime the past is to be understood and estimated as the facts stand, and only thoroughly sympathetic comprehension of those men, who have actually been the typical Americans, will enable us to effect that purpose. The fact that Clay rather than Webster, Jackson and not John Quincy Adams, represented the peculiar American culture, the qualities that made him a great commander and a great president were qualities which would have made him an equally great frontiersman. You cannot imagine Hamilton or Madison or Jefferson or Lincoln or Jackson or the Pinckneys living tolerably on the frontier. They are not Americans in the sense in which Clay and Jackson and Lincoln are Americans. We may wish that the typical Americans of the past had had more knowledge, a more cultivated appreciation of the value of what was old and established, a juster view of foreign nations and foreign politics; that they had been more like Webster and less like Jackson, and we may hope that the typical American of the future will be wiser and better poised. But in the meantime the past is to be understood and estimated as the facts stand, and only thoroughly sympathetic comprehension of those men, who have actually been the typical Americans, will enable us to effect that purpose. The fact that Clay rather than Webster, Jackson and not John Quincy Adams, represented the peculiar American culture, the qualities that made him a great commander and a great president were qualities which would have made him an equally great frontiersman. You cannot imagine Hamilton or Madison or Jefferson or Lincoln or Jackson or the Pinckneys living tolerably on the frontier. They are not Americans in the sense in which Clay and Jackson and Lincoln are Americans. We may wish that the typical Americans of the past had had more knowledge, a more cultivated appreciation of the value of what was old and established, a juster view of foreign nations and foreign politics; that they had been more like Webster and less like Jackson, and we may hope that the typical American of the future will be wiser and better poised. But in the meantime the past is to be understood and estimated as the facts stand, and only thoroughly sympathetic comprehension of those men, who have actually been the typical Americans, will enable us to effect that purpose. The fact that Clay rather than Webster, Jackson and not John Quincy Adams, represented the peculiar American culture, the qualities that made him a great commander and a great president were qualities which would have made him an equally great frontiersman. You cannot imagine Hamilton or Madison or Jefferson or Lincoln or Jackson or the Pinckneys living tolerably on the frontier. They are not Americans in the sense in which Clay and Jackson and Lincoln are Americans. We may wish that the typical Americans of the past had had more knowledge, a more cultivated appreciation of the value of what was old and established, a juster view of foreign nations and foreign politics; that they had been more like Webster and less like Jackson, and we may hope that the typical American of the future will be wiser and better poised. But in the meantime the past is to be understood and estimated as the facts stand, and only thoroughly sympathetic comprehension of those men, who have actually been the typical Americans, will enable us to effect that purpose. The fact that Clay rather than Webster, Jackson and not John Quincy Adams, represented the peculiar American culture, the qualities that made him a great commander and a great president were qualities which would have made him an equally great frontiersman. You cannot imagine Hamilton or Madison or Jefferson or