"Early in the Winter, I took a severe cold which developed into an obstinate, hacking cough, very painful to endure and troubling me day and night, for nine weeks, in spite of numerous remedies. Ayer's Cherry Pectoral being recommended me, I began to take it, and inside of 94 hours, I was relieved of the tickling in my throat. Before I finished the bottle, my cough was nearly gone. I cannot speak too highly of its excellence."

SOME IRRIGATION TALK.

It will not do to attempt to throw cold water on the enthusiasm that has grown apace in favor of the irrigation of western soils. The better way is to catch the spirit of the times and try to follow it out to some natural and legitimate conclusion. The eyes of the whole continent are at a time like this turned upon the arid west for some remedy against future afflictions of a type similar to those we are now laboring under. Enough is known of the history of irrigation, and of the various elements requisite to its fullest measure of success, to inspire hope and courage in the breasts of all home loving people. It is the part of wisdom in a people situated as are the people of all Nebraska to desire to know to what extent irrigation can be made a thing practicable among them. It is not simply the people who are owners of the lands most in need of irrigation that are interested in the matter; every man whose business operations fall within the bounds of the state is more or less directly interested in the matter of having the waters of the state appropriated in a manner that shall secure the greatest benefit to all the people.

The irrigation problem is at best a complex thing. But the great and over-shadowing feature of it all is the question of water supply. Give us water without limit and the desert can speedily be made to blossom as the rose. Nobody pretends that all of the arid portions of Nebraska can be brought under the ditch, and it is for this very reason that the problem assumes the overwhelming importance that it does. There must be brought into the play the best of skill and economy in the distribution of these waters. Large sections of the state now helpless without the friendly aid of waters that pass them by, can and will be made regularly productive of all kinds of farm crops with yields unknown to lands that depended upon the uncertainty, insufficiency or irregularity of rainfall for the making of such crops. With the building of ditches and the construction of reservoirs in the right places and under certain restrictions there can be no failing of the water supplies. Nebraska is blessed with rivers that carry immense volumes of water from the mountains in the course of the year and if all this vast volume of water be conserved through the intervention of the hand of man, and distributed and appropriated in like manner through man's devices, it is bound to be in line with the evolution of the agriculture of the state as preordained by Him who doeth all things well.—Nebraska Farmer.

 People are talking of "Japan's big loan of $50,000,000." Japan has a big fight on hand, and fifty millions is only a modest starter. Grover Cleveland's administration borrowed just that amount and used it all up in a time of profound peace, and inside of six months.—Inter Ocean.

Among the latest inventions on the market is "a burglar and fire-proof coffin," which locks on the inside and has other patented arrangements for guarding against disturbance after death. Cremation has at least one advantage, that of making the occupation of the grave robber a hopeless one.—Boston Globe.

It is reported on good authority that five hundred anarchists expelled from other countries, are now on their way to this country. A bill was introduced in the senate Tuesday, to prohibit their landing and prevent the possibility of such occurrences in the future. When the bill went to the house of representatives it was vehemently opposed and finally beaten by representative Warner, the democratic representative from New York.

ATTENTION.
 All persons holding policies in the Royal Insurance Co. are hereby notified to at once bring or send same to the office of Geo. E. Prosser for examination to see if correct and valid.
