Phineas, my son, cultivate your gall. No one succeeds so well in this world as the man who has large quantities of this component of the human system. A modest unassuming individual who makes no effort to inform the people that he is great will achieve very little in the way of becoming popular with the masses, whereas the imperious, impudent and supercilious one who is "full of sound fury" will do more in ten minutes toward convincing the common herd of his importance than the former will do in ten weeks by his unobtrusive and unostentatious behavior. I am sorry to be compelled to admit that this condition prevails, but you have only to look about you to be convinced of this fact. Nine-tenths of our great men will not bear analysis. A post mortem examination of their anatomy would reveal the fact that they have very little liver and a great deal of gall. Their greatness lies only in their imaginations. A modest man's greatness is rarely discovered until after his death.—Dakota County Record.

The bicycle exhibition in New York has drawn greater crowds than even the horse show, the attendance last week exceeding 80,000. A season of lively wheeling may be predicted for 1896.

These handsome Buffet Smoking and Library Cars are entirely new throughout of latest design, contain all modern improvements, and are well supplied with writing material, the leading daily papers, illustrated periodicals, magazines, etc.

The fact that these cars run daily via "The Overland Limited" and that the Union Pacific was the line west of Chicago to inaugurate this service should commend itself for all.
