It Pays

To hurry sometimes. Haste doesn't always make waste. The man who hurries into one of our saves money for no where else can he buy the same quality of goods—the same fit—for the same money.

Ten Dollar Suits

But, perhaps, he wants a swell suit, better fabric. If so, he can lay down Eighteen or Twenty Dollars and take away from our store a suit good enough to wear to any party or reception. Our line is so large, so complete, that we can satisfy anybody, everybody.

In Furnishing Goods, Hats and Shoes, we also take the lead.

BETWEEN THE RIVERS.

The christian ladies' aid made about thirteen dollars at the ice cream and strawberry festival given by them last Saturday evening.

Mrs. Crosby and Mrs. Gummere, from near Sutherland, were the guests of Mrs. Spurrier last Saturday. Mrs. Ditto accompanied her mother home.

Miss Cammack and Miss Cal Sullivan attended church in North Platte Sunday.

Miss Maud Hoover, of Grand Island, is visiting her grandmother in Hinman precinct.

Mrs. W. H. Null is on the sick list.

Jones and Trovillo shipped a car of potatoes from Nichols yesterday.

The high winds of last week unroofed a hen house for W. O. Thompson.

Rev. A. Coslet administered the ordinance of baptism last Friday in the slough near P. V. Zooks.

Thirteen bicyclists passed up the road Sunday afternoon. They were going to Hershey to attend the base ball game.

Miss Jessie Bonwell and Nellie Wills, of the Platte, were visiting with Miss Stella Goodman the last of the week.

W. S. Ross, of Myrtle, was visiting with I. M. Baley last week. He reports crops looking fine, but the cut worms have destroyed about half his corn. What is left is doing well.

Children's day services will be observed by the Platte Valley Sunday-school next Sunday morning, commencing at 9:30.

Miss Cammack was the victim of a surprise party last Thursday evening. Games of various kinds were employed to while away the time until the wee small hours.

Miss Cammack leaves for her home in Salem, Iowa, Wednesday. Freddie Spurrier will accompany her, where he will spend a short time visiting his grandparents.

Levi Wolf has returned from Perkins county. He reports everything looking quite well. He thinks they will have irrigation there in the near future.

G. R. Golvin, of Hershey, has a son living in that part of St. Louis visited by the tornado. He was not injured, but had two horses killed by an engine boiler being blown through the roof of his stable.

J. Tilford lost a horse last week. He loaned the animal to L. Waugh to ride on the ditch. Waugh stopped to do some work, tied the horse to the handle, and the horse jerked the shovel out of the ground. This scared him and he started to run, the shovel cutting his feet all the time. We learn that the animal stopped at Null's, his feet being almost severed, so the horse had to be killed. Tilford valued him at forty dollars.

POLITICAL PARAGRAPHS.
Secretary Carlisle denies the report that he has become wealthy while holding his present office. The president appears to be the only member of the administration who has made a fortune.

That administration democratic delegation from Nebraska may after all conclude that there is no use for it to present itself at the convention doors in Chicago, only to have them slammed in its face as soon as the body organizes.—Bee.

Vice president Stevenson predicts that "there will be a heap of vest-pocket voting for the republican ticket by sound money democrats" this year; and there is every reason to believe that for once in his life he is right.

The Kansas democratic convention was delayed half a day while the committee was trying to find some preacher willing to open proceedings with prayer. The public generally will feel more respect than ever before for the Kansas clergy.—Council Bluffs Nonpart.

The republican party will take their good as well as their bad points. Good, because constant repetition so identifies one with the character impressed that it becomes second nature to sonated that it becomes second nature to the feel and act it. Irritation may in the end make one mechanical, but at least when inspiration fails, resumes its work from crudity. Joseph Jefferson once told me that in "The Rivals" he had always gained an effect by pulling off the fingers of his gloves separately and deliberately to accentuate certain words, but that under inspiration he would throw technique to the winds and have the glove off with one jerk. Who that has ever seen his Bob can forget those brilliant green gloves and the fun he got out of them!

lead the great showman. He doesn't want any politics in his as long as the show business continues to pan out so well.—Kearney Hub.

The mints of the United States turned out last month, in a gold bug era, a million and a half silver dollars. This was the average production of silver dollars in fifteen years during the halcyon period of free and unlimited coinage of silver from the foundation of the government down to the crime of '73. It's curious how the old thing works. But in those times the silver dollar wasn't the "cheap dollar" and nobody wanted to coin it.—Journal.

Referring to the assertion that the only way to meet cheap foreign labor competition is to adopt free silver coinage, Senator Morrill points out that exchanges between the United States and Japan, for instance, could be equalized only by reducing American wages to the Japanese standard or raising Japanese wages to the American level. "Free coinage of silver of silver as a remedy against Japanese or any other cheap foreign labor, he adds, "would prove very much like taking refuge in a pest-house to avoid the plague."

Some of the shrewd politicians are trying to kill off Auditor Moore's gubernatorial boomlet by bringing in a constitutional amendment which provides that "no person shall be eligible to the office of governor or lieutenant-governor who shall not have attained to the age of 30 years, etc., and none of the officers of the executive department shall be eligible to any other state office during the period for which they shall have been elected." The supreme court has been asked to determine the matter but it looks as if it was going a good way around to kill of a candidate.—Grand Island Independent.

In an open letter in the June number of the "Golden Rod Workman" Grand Master Workman Tate admonishes the brethren of the order to be extremely cautious in their selection of state officials this year, in view of the fact that there seems to be some disposition to make a fight against mutual insurance companies. Reviewing the work the order has accomplished, he says: "In the brief period of its existence it has poured into the empty pocket-books of the widows and orphans of its deceased members, more than sixty-five millions of dollars. It has thus saved 32,500 families from poverty and want. Allowing an average of five to the family, it has sheltered and protected 162,500 widows and orphan children from the dangers incident to the death of the husband and father."

"Irrigation's the thing," says Chauncey M. Depew, after a month's trip through the western states. Like every one else who enters the domain of King Water, Dr. Depew was converted quickly and easily, and he has now returned to the east to tell the farmers of that section a few of the "blessings of aridity."

What matters it if the water does cost something, it's cheaper than fertilizers, and a crop is always assured. More power to the silver tongue of the renowned doctor in teaching the eastern public of the advantage and possibilities of the Great West instead of the Greater New York.—Irrigation Age.

Statistician tell us that in no year during the last quarter of a century has corn failed to reach 40 cents a bushel in July and August in this market. The question is, will this year be an exception to the rule? Nebraska is vitally interested in this matter, for their are vast quantities of corn stored throughout the state awaiting the rise in market price. When the corn moves money will be plentiful in the country towns and our jobbers will derive benefits in turn.—Bee.

PLAYS THAT PLEASE.

Good and Bad Points of Long Runs From the Actors' Standpoint.

Long runs, like most things, have their good as well as their bad points. Good, because constant repetition so identifies one with the character impressed that it becomes second nature to the feel and act it. Irritation may in the end make one mechanical, but at least when inspiration fails, resumes its work from crudity. Joseph Jefferson once told me that in "The Rivals" he had always gained an effect by pulling off the fingers of his gloves separately and deliberately to accentuate certain words, but that under inspiration he would throw technique to the winds and have the glove off with one jerk. Who that has ever seen his Bob can forget those brilliant green gloves and the fun he got out of them!

NOT A WORLD BEATER.

To say that our stock is a world beater would be an exaggeration, but to say that it is the best in North Platte is the plain truth.

On the other hand, the evil effects of long runs are indisputable. Prominent among them is a general mental weariness which often causes one to forget the most familiar lines and to turn blankly to the prompter's box or to some friendly actor for the words. This happened to me several times, notably in "The Winter's Tale" in London, where, after playing it 100 nights, I had to be prompted in several of Hermione's great speeches. Edwin Booth, during the long run of "Hamlet" at his own theater, frequently called for the lines. An actor who was in his company told me that Booth turned to him one night, and with a look of consternation asked, "What was to say next. His mind for the moment had become a blank. The actor gave him the word. Booth began the speech, faltered again, was prompted a second time, but finding it impossible to continue called out in a loud voice, "Ring down the curtain."

Many other examples might be cited to show how weary the brain grows after acting the same part six or seven times weekly for 100 or 200 consecutive nights, with only the rest of Sunday to distract the mind.—Mary Anderson's Memoirs.

They All Do It.
The wanderer had returned after many years, and was inquiring about his old friends.

"Brown," he said, "is in the wholesale clothing business, I believe."

"Wholesale clothing and bicycles," corrected the native. "The firm carries a side line of bicycles, you know."

"And Jones has a grocery store, I'm told."

"Yes. Full line of groceries and Bull Run bicycles. He's the agent for the Bull Run wheel."

"Smith went into the manufacturing business, didn't he?"

"Oh, yes. He got interested in a sewing machine manufactory, and a little later they took up bicycles and are doing a rushing business. I understand they have a capacity of over 100 wheels a day."

"And what's White doing?"

"He's the agent for a famous gun-maker and is doing well. He sells all kinds of guns, pistols and bicycles."

"And Johnson?"

"Oh, he's a manufacturing jeweler, and he turns out a mighty good wheel too."

"Billings, I suppose, is still in the furniture business?"

"Yes, but I understand that he turns out a better bicycle than he does desk or bureau."

The returned traveler began to betray some surprise.

"Is Wilson still in the livery business?" he asked with some hesitation.

"Certainly, but he devotes most of his time to the little bicycle repair shop in the rear of his stable."

"Ah, there goes old Bones, the sexton. The old fellow is—"

"Oh, he's agent for an automatic pump for inflating tires."

"Is there any one who isn't in the bicycle business?" asked the returned traveler sadly.

"I don't think of any one just now," replied the native.—Chicago Post.
