try Editor. The old time devil was keen to learn. He had gall. He wasn't afraid to ask the milliners for advertising or printing. He dreamed of owning a paper of his own. He experimented in a thousand ways. He lived in the office almost, being there early and late. He made a battery and copper plated types before the first type founder thought of doing it. He did stereotyping in a rude way, making a matrix from blotting paper. Desiring to do his work better, he tried to buy proper materials for stereotyping, but he was bluffed so easily by the prices or talk given him by the jealous trusts. A tramp printer from Chicago made him believe that gasoline could be made. The Chicago man pointed to a big can of the fluid and insisted that he had made it. Gasoline was high priced then. The devil sold the gasoline the printer said he had made to a rival office, and the two divided the money. "Make some more," said the devil. "There is a demand for it." The next morning he called on his editor friend again, and when he found him discussing prohibition with two or three ministers and one or two of the elders of the town he lurched right into the editorial den and joined in the talk to help the editor along. He was very drunk. He cried and said that naturally he was a prohibitionist, but he really longed to die and go to heaven, only he had become "such a d--d skeptic he didn't believe there was such a place.' Then he went to sleep. The preachers looked at him in pity. The editor spoke kindly of him as a comrade who had seen better days. As the editor talked

MANY INTOXICANTS.

MR. JOHNSON, WHO TRAVELS, FREE-LY DISCUSSES THE SUBJECT.

He Occasionally Indulges In Hasheesh Himself - How an Opium Habitue Was coholic Exhilaration.

Johnson "travels for" a New York state wine and brandy producing firm and is a veritable mine of information concerning wines and spirits, alcohol percentages, bouquets, methods and processes of refining and "aging" wines, and besides is a connoisseur of no mean quality in everything drinkable. No one ever saw him drink more of any alhe sips before passing a wonderfully near infallible verdict on a sample. Nevertheless Johnson remarked one day to a friend that he took an occasional spree. "Not an alcoholic drunk." he explained, "but a hasheesh vision." "Hasheesh!" exclaimed the other.

Why, I've always regarded that a more dreadful than spirits. "Perhaps it is," replied Johnson. "I don't advise any one to use it. But in parts of Europe and in all oriental countries many persons use hasheesh as I do. The effect of the drug taken in the larger quantity is to stimulate the imagination. It seems to release the soul from the body's bonds. Fatigue, depression, mental weariness, business cares, all harassments, in fact, are thrown off, and the mind revels in an abnormal and pleasurable superactivity. I never experienced any unpleasant reaction.

"Persons of different temperaments are affected in different ways. I knew a man who 'wanted to try' a dose of hasheesh with me. He had a most unpleasant time of it. He said that his mental sufferings were indescribable, fear, or rather apprehension, of something mysterious and more grewsome than all the ghost stories ever told rolled into one awful horror oppressing him throughout the short time that he was under the spell of the hemp. He never will try it again, for which I am glad, for he might get into the habit of it.

Johnson's business takes him among pharmacists a good deal, and by way of adding to his disclaimer of being a hasheesh slave he remarked that every druggist has among his customers one or more opium "fiends" who do not ing 100 small powders of morphine one day," said Johnson, "and I asked him why he was putting up so many. The clerk replied that he put up that number every Thursday for a certain lady on renewal of a physician's prescription. The physician had authorized the renewal, and the patient had been taking the morphia for several years in the same quantity. The habit probably grew out of the drug having been prescribed originally for the relief of some obstinate pain. The patient only knew that the powders kept her pain away.

"This same drug clerk also told of the successful cure of a sufferer from the opium habit, another lady who realized her sitmation and longed to be free. She went to live at her physician's house. She had been drinking so much landarum a day. The doctor began by allowing her the equivalent in morphine in capsules, taken at the hours at which she had been accustomed to take the liquid. He kept her on a nourishing and stimulating diet and very gradually, without the patient's knowledge, reduced the size of the doses of morphia.

'After a time he substituted for one of the morphine capsules daily one of the same appearance, filled with einchonidia, an alkaloid of Peruvian bark like quinine, but weaker. The patient did not feel the difference. Another cinchonidia capsule was substituted daily after another week or two, and so on, until after some months the habitue was takng nothing but einchonidia one day, with, perhaps, two morphine doses the next. As gradually as before these were eliminated, and the patient was told one day that she had had no morphia for a month. She was surprised and incredulous, but she at last realized that she was cured. I don't know Two American captains were recently | that every one could be freed from the opium habit in that mauner.
