Now if President Sam Ham, of Hayti, would send one of his subjects over to Germany to run amuck in Kaiser "Bill's" palace and get logged off to the cooler, he could then call the game a draw.

SECRETARY OF STATE PORTER'S explanation for having monkeyed with the ballots of the late election is in line with the burglar's explanation when caught in the bank vault. "I didn't come to steal, but only wanted to see how much money there was in the vault."

The late turbulent scenes in the Austrian reichsrath, together with the rioting of the Czech populace, brings the Austrian empire almost to the brink of a general revolution. Austria has the most dangerous mixed population of any nation on earth, and it will tax the utmost sagacity of Emperor Joseph and his premiers to keep peace in the family.

The glowing reports sent out by Alaska mining fakirs of the immense wealth hid away in the bowels of the earth over there that can be had for the digging, is having the desired effect on an ever credulous people, and thousands of persons will swallow the bait, hook and all, in their eagerness to become—wretched.

The courts throughout the country appear to have come at last to the conclusion that defaulting bank presidents, cashiers, and state and county officials, must be prosecuted to the full extent of the law, and a few good examples have been set. Our populist friends who are now riding rough-shod over the state election laws may see the handwriting on the wall.

JUDGING from the land-grabbing proclivities of European nations Uncle Sam cannot be too prompt in taking full possession of the Hawaiian islands, for better or worse; even the Canucks are casting longing glances at the islands to land their trans-continental telegraph cable. Possession is nine parts of the law and will save us a heap of trouble in the future.

SYLVESTER SCOVILL, the American reporter who is making a close investigation of affairs in Cuba, reports that a number of Cubans, wishing to surrender under General Blanco's amnesty proclamation, were cruelly butchered by the Spanish soldiery as soon as they had them within their lines. This shows plainly what the Cuban patriots may expect if they trust the peace offering of the Spanish cut-throats.

PAST experience shows that the present method of state and county officials, of receiving security for funds from bondsmen, is in some instances entirely inadequate. As the state grows larger in assessment, the amount of bonds required by the men who handle the state and counties' money, will increase in proportion, which, in fact, excludes the man of but small means and without rich friends, from holding an office where a bond is required, for he is either private individual or bank, whoever goes on an official bond for ten thousand dollars or whatever the sum might be, expects a compensation in proportion, and herein lies the inception of peculation—robbing Peter to pay Paul. But the greatest danger is in the fact that the bondsmen have the right to dictate the wording of the bond, as has been proven whenever a case of default came to light. The bond is so full of loop-holes for escape that it is only rarely that the state or county recovers a cent. Would it not be advisable that some new method be embraced and tried; for instance a bond company, even if the treasurer's deputy is subject to the bond company's appointment, and the premium to be paid by the state and county. This plan would be more secure and at the same time leave the treasurer to attend to his business unhampered by any obligation. The matter should be acted upon by our legislature at its next session.

A South Dakota dame with a lack of confidence in man, and who has long since declared emphatically her intentions of "going it alone," recently got hold of an advertisement of a mining company, with headquarters at Seattle, Wash., that was supposed to be doing business in a hole in the ground somewhere in Mexico or Alaska. The usual "glittering" inducements were offered as bait. She corresponded with somebody and was asked to invest $500 in the company's claims which would give her the desirable position of secretary and assistant treasurer, and 25,000 shares of stock in the subterranean venture. But her mistrustful nature asserted itself and unlike too many of the opposite sex she took the advice of the proverbial grass-hopper before allowing her bank account to be cut down. It is needless to add that the dear girl is now exceedingly tickled over her good fortune, as she has just been advised by the Seattle chief of police to keep her grub stake. A fair warning to those who are tumbling pell mell into the fortune-seeking business with nothing in sight but an empty sack while the other fellows rattle your hard-earned money.

EVENTS IN NEBRASKA.

Work was begun last week of harvesting ice for the soldier's home at Grand Island. The supply comes from a lake of the place and is of a superior quality.

The Lincoln police have acquired such a habit for "pulling things" that it is almost unsafe for a stranger without a pass-port to go there on penalty of being pulled and landed in jail.

Coal is a scarce article at Brady Island and unless relief is forthcoming a famine will overtake her. The natives threaten to resort to deeds dark and unchristian-like if a deaf ear is longer turned to their pleadings.

The coal rustlers are keeping the detectives on a kangaroo jump along the Union Pacific road since severe cold weather set in and several arrests have followed. Before the guilty persons get through with the legal buzz-saw they will discover that their coal bill for this winter is a mighty big one.

Ogalala people who have organized so liberally toward increasing the population of Keith county, are now confronted with the crushing fact that the seating capacity of their school house, especially of the primary grade, has of a sudden become inadequate, and another school house must be had.

The boys who insist on frequenting Brewer Ott's ice pond near Grand Island had better have leather seats put in their trousers when they go skating. The management of the brewery needs the ice and hints that the practice the boys have of squirting tobacco juice all over it will not enhance its quality.

"Drunkness is such a rarity at Grand Island," discovers the Denver Post philosopher. "that when a stranger acquires a jag he is quickly escorted out of town and chloride of lime scattered over his zigzaggy footprints." A stranger, under the same condition can thank his lucky stars if he gets out of Denver without leaving a leg or two sticking in the gluey substance of her muddy streets.

The work on the Paxton Irrigation District canals is progressing nicely. At the head of each branch of the ditch there is to be 5000 feet of underflow work with the sides of the ditches to be left with a slant of 1 to 4 feet which is the same as is usually left by water. A Mr. Knight of Kansas City has recently contracted to do all the construction work then not contracted for. He is also talking of buying up bonds issued to other contractors.—Keith County News.

Several farmers of Keith county report that they have lost a number of cattle this winter from some unknown cause. One man thinks he has solved the mystery and attributes his misfortune to the pesky little red bugs that light on the corn stalks in large numbers and are eaten by the cattle. He has observed that the cattle, shortly after being turned into the field, "kick up their heels." The bug juice sold by the average saloon keeper would have the same effect.

A colored courtesan of South Omaha lingered too long over the flowing bowl the other night and on her way home laid down to rest on the sidewalk. When discovered by a policeman a few hours later her clothes were frozen fast to the sidewalk and life was almost extinct. She was removed from the undesirable lodging only after a fire had been built under the walk, when she was taken to the calaboose to thaw out. The judge thought her actions warranted a fine of ten dollars and trimmings.

There is a Class of People who are injured by the use of coffee. Recently there has been placed in all the grocery stores a new preparation called GRAIN O, made of pure grains, that takes the place of coffee. The most delicate stomach receives it without distress, and but few can tell it from coffee. It does not cost over 1/4 as much. Children may drink it with great benefit. 15 cts. and 25 cts. per package. Try it. Ask for GRAIN O.

OLD THIRD GEORGIA.

BATTLEFIELD CAREER OF ONE OF LEE'S CRACK REGIMENTS.

First to Leave Georgia For the Seat of War—Brilliant Work at Malvern Hill, Chancellorsville and Gettysburg—Commanders Shot Down in Every Battle.

GEORGIA troops had no trumpet to sound their praises as soldiers in the service of the southern Confederacy. Battlefield records are the only memorials of their valor. Many of Lee's best soldiers in the Army of Northern Virginia were Georgians, and from a series of regimental histories prepared in 1864, while the regiment was at Petersburg, the data for the following sketch of the "Old Third" Georgia was obtained.

In the spring of 1864 the congress of the Confederate states passed a joint resolution of thanks to the officers and men of the Third Georgia regiment for having been first to leave their state to battle on the soil of Virginia, for their gallant record on many historic battlefields and for having as an entire regiment to a man "cheerfully and unambiguously re-enlisted for the war."

The Third Georgia was organized in the spring of 1861 from ten companies which, with one or two exceptions, had been in existence several years previous to the war. Nine companies were represented—Burke, by the "Burke Guards"; Putnam, by the "Brown Rifles"; Green, by the "Dawson Grays"; Morgan, by the "Home Guards"; Honston, by the "Governor's Guards"; Wilkinson, by the "Wilkinson Rifles"; Richmond, by the "Confederate Light Guards," and the "Blodgett Volunteers." Clarke county turned out the "Athens Guards." A volunteer who had come forward at Augusta and enlisted among the privates was elected colonel. This was Ambrose E. Wright, who became noted as a general in Lee's army.

After serving a short time at Norfolk the Third marched to the defense of the coast of North Carolina against Burnside's Roanoke expedition. An incident there illustrated the nature of Burnside's warfare. One day the regiment embarked on two or three gunboats belonging to what was called the Mosquito fleet and pounced upon the United States transport steamer Fanny, which was carrying provisions and clothing from the fleet off Hatteras to a small camp on the Chicamaoconco river. The Fanny was captured with all its cargo, 2 cannons and 40 prisoners. The supplies were intended for the Twentieth Indiana regiment, and many of the prisoners were from that command. Three days later, having been re-enforced, the Third swooped down upon the camp on the banks of the Chicamaoconco, shelled out its occupants and seized the entire equipment of tents, baggage and rations. Being largely outnumbered, without any supports, the Twentieth Indiana, whose camp it was, retreated to Hatteras.

Those two regiments, the Third Georgia and Twentieth Indiana, met afterward on even ground at the battle of Oak Grove, in front of Richmond, June 25, 1862. It was an all day skirmish rather than a battle, but was a good test for soldier pluck. At the close of it, after nightfall, the colonel of the Twentieth Indiana sent a flag of truce to Colonel Wright of the Third Georgia asking permission to bury his dead.

The Georgians remained in North Carolina until the Army of the Potomac laid siege to Richmond in May, 1862. With the exception of the skirmish at the 25th of June, when McClellan seized the ridge at Oak Grove for his heavy batteries, this regiment did not take part in the fighting around Richmond; neither did the brigade nor division nor corps to which it was attached. Colonel Wright was promoted to the command of the brigade, and the Third Georgia was led by Major John R. Sturgis.

The first heavy battle of the "Old Third" was on the 1st of July, when, in the ranks of Wright's brigade, it charged the Confederate regiments at Malvern Hill. General Wright led his men forward under the shelter of a bluff to a position a few hundred yards from McClellan's guns. On a signal the line dashed up the slope, its leader with his cap poised on his glittering sword, in the face of a murderous fire of shot, shell, canister and bullets. When within 300 yards of the guns, General Wright saw a body of Federal infantry marching around his left flank. This command was the Fourteenth New York volunteers. Wright threw the Third Georgia regiment musket toward the rear, and with a sudden change of front the Georgians poured a galling fire upon the New Yorkers. This was returned by a fearful and direct fire from the Federal batteries. The battle raged there for more than an hour. A second charge was ordered from that point, and Wright carried his brigade almost to the muzzles of the enemy's batteries. He had less than 300 men left out of the 1,000 which started with him upon the charge. Darkness soon stopped the fighting. The Georgians maintained their position under fire until after 9 o'clock. The loss in the Third Georgia regiment, which went into battle with 250 rank and file, was 157. Out of that number 57 were killed or mortally wounded. Major Sturgis fell at the head of a regiment under the very muzzles of the enemy's guns. The captain who succeeded him was also severely wounded.

In taking leave of the Chickamaoconco region the chronicler of the fortunes of the Third Georgia states that during the war for any case of Catarrh that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure, F. J. GENERAL A. E. WRIGHT. (First colonel Third Georgia.) ter, July 30, 1864. With the rest of Mahone's division it charged upon the Federal lines around the Crater and met with a heavy loss. Its casualties in the siege of Petersburg up to that date were 187 killed and wounded. In reviewing the career of the regiment up to that time the historian says that not a field officer who ever commanded the regiment in action escaped the enemy's bullets. One company had lost 101 men killed and wounded and another 94. The total roster of the regiment up to July, 1864, was 1,463. Out of that number 218 had been killed, 629 wounded and 213 had died from disease, making a total of 431 deaths. In addition 342 men had been discharged for disability, making a total loss to the regiment of 773, or over 50 per cent of its strength. GEORGE L. KILMER.

The Refugee. "Do you see the man?" "Yes, I see the man." "And the crowd that is following him?" "Yes." "Does the mob want to lynch him? What has he done? Murdered somebody?" "No, he has not committed a crime, but an awful fate is in store for him. He has just been getting married, and the men who are chasing him are life insurance solicitors."—Cleveland Leader.

The Georgians encamped that winter on the banks of the Rappahannock, and their historian gives a further hint at the hardships, which have heretofore been looked at chiefly from the northern side. He says, "The suffering of this command at United States fort (on the Rappahannock) from cold, short rations and a scanty supply of clothing could scarcely have been excelled by those which so severely tried the fortitude and patriotism of our forefathers when quartered in the historic Valley Forge." Under its fifth commander, Major John E. Jones, the Third entered the campaign at Chancellorsville and was in the thick of the fight from the first day until the last.

It was in the advance of Stonewall Jackson's flanking column and fought for the right of way around Hooker's army. On the morning of Sunday, May 3, when the grand charge was made upon the position at the Chancellor House, the Third Georgia was sent out alone to clear the way of Federal sharpshooters. The next day it hurried down the plank road toward Fredericksburg and took part in the battle of Salem Church with another wing of Hooker's army. It was in battle every day from May 1 to May 4 and came out with a loss of 189 killed and wounded, none missing. Major Jones was among the wounded and suffered the loss of his right arm. He was the fourth leader shot down at the head of the regiment in ten months of campaigning.

A large number of recruits joined the regiment about this time, and the Third marched to Gettysburg 600 strong. Its most brilliant action was on the evening of the second day, when A. P. Hill's corps took up the fight which Longstreet had begun when attacking Round Top. General Wright's brigade, in which the Third Georgia still served, was one of the commands which pierced the Federal line on the right of Sickles' corps, when Longstreet's troops were dashing upon its front. The Federals were driven from their guns on the ridge along the Emmitsburg road. Wright's brigade seized 20 pieces of cannon, 11 of which were prizes of the Third Georgia regiment. However, the support brigades did not come up, and Wright was driven out before the day closed. The severe fighting of the regiment was confined to this one charge, which was very brief, but it suffered the loss of 41 killed and 148 wounded.

During the charge, when the regiment was driving the enemy, the color bearer was shot down and the flag fell to the ground. It was immediately snatched up by Adjutant Alexander, who bore it at the head of the regiment triumphantly into the Federal battery in front in spite of a severe wound in his right arm. The enemy made a target of him, and his clothing was pierced by eight bullets.

On the march back through northern Virginia after the battle of Gettysburg the Third, now reduced to about 200 men, was engaged in the stubborn advance of Manassas Gap, where an attempt was made to cut Lee's columns in two. In that action the Third had the post of honor upon the mountain top, and, although flanked, held its position bravely. In this action 14 men were killed and 45 wounded. In the battles of the Wilderness campaign the losses in Confederate regiments are no guide to the severity of the fight.

The Third fought in the Wilderness and at Spotsylvania. On the 14th of May it participated in a charge upon Grant's breastworks at Spotsylvania, and in a short fight of 20 minutes lost 78 killed and wounded. The division in which the Third Georgia served at that time, formerly under General R. H. Anderson, was led by General William Mahone. The annals of the regiment close with the battle of Petersburg Crapen, pencil and brush. The French sculptor Falguiere has completed a gigantic statue of Liberty for the Pantheon in Paris. It is 33 feet in height. Emile Zola delivered the oration at the recent unveiling of the memorial to the late Dr. Magnusson in the Parc de Monceau, Paris. William Dean Howells, who recently made a trip to Europe for the benefit of his health, is said to have overtaxed his energies severely lately by his hard work.

Alfred Ordway, the well known painter, who died long ago in Boston, was the founder of the Boston Art club and the Paint and Clay club. He was 78 years old at the time of his death. Although she refuses to permit the public to see her photograph, Miss Marie Correll does not object to a painting of herself being placed on exhibition. The painting is now to be seen in a London gallery. It hangs in solitary state in a dim religious light.

For his new book, entitled "Following the Equator," it is said that Mark Twain will receive $40,000, the whole of which he will turn over to his creditors, to whom he owes about $20,000. He has been invited by an English publishing house to write his autobiography, and is said to be considering the offer.

THE LISTENER. N. R. Freeman, a justice of the peace at Winamac, Ind., who is 94 years old, has married a 23-year-old couple. The late John M. Langston was the first negro to enter a theological school in the United States. He was born of slave parents. Colonel J. J. Ayres, who died recently in Los Angeles, founded the first paper in the state in 1851. This was the Calaveras Chronicle. It is said that Henry M. Stanley is going to resume his journalistic work. He is going out to Bulawayo as a guest of the chartered company. Prince Krapotkin, the famous Russian anarchist, is a small, benevolent-looking old gentleman, preaching brotherly love and deprecating violence. Senor Joaquín Carri, the new Spanish consul at Philadelphia, was a successful lawyer in Madrid until he entered the diplomatic service some years ago. William Penn Nixon, who has just retired from control of the Chicago Inter Ocean, has been identified with that paper for over a quarter of a century. He was formerly a lawyer in Cincinnati. Henry R. Pritchard of Indianapolis, who is the oldest living preacher in the United States, has lived for many years in Dublin, where he is a professor in the Catholic university and a fellow of the Royal university. Sir Wilfrid Laurier, premier of Canada, is described as "tall, moderately slight, smooth shaven, with a graceful bearing and one not to be overlooked." He speaks with a strong French accent and is always courteous. The Rev. Henry Scheel, the pastor emeritus of Zion Lutheran church, Baltimore, who has just died at the age of 96 years, became pastor of Zion church 65 years ago and was universally known and loved in Baltimore. Prince Louis Bonaparte is so popular in France that it is said the government is seriously concerned, but is afraid to banish him lest it incur the displeasure of the czar of Russia, who treats the prince as a member of his family. Hugo Wolf, the Viennese composer, has developed such eccentricities that his friends have been obliged to put him in an asylum. A society formed in Vienna to spread his name made it its first rule that none of the members should have anything to do with Wolf personally. General John T. Wilder, pension agent at Knoxville, Tenn., was born at Hunter, N. Y., in 1830. He was living in Indiana when the war broke out, and enlisted, serving with great gallantry through the war. At its close he went to Tennessee, and has probably done more than any man in the state for the mineral development of eastern Tennessee.

THE TATTLER. "Mile. Mark Twain" is what Figaro of Paris calls the daughter of Samuel L. Clemens. Mary Anderson Navarro is not going to sing on the stage professionally. Nevertheless she is going to Paris for the purpose of cultivating her voice. Mrs. Kate E. Johnson of Norton, Kan., has been elected county treasurer on the Republican ticket. She owns two good farms and manages them profitably. Miss Nellie Salome Thomas of Boston while in England went to Malvern, and, after decorating the grave of Jenny Lind, started a fund for a memorial window in the abbey. Mrs. Lou V. Stephens, the wife of the governor of Missouri, has published in a newspaper the diary she kept when a schoolgirl and since her husband's political elevation. Miss Susan B. Anthony, while in St. Paul not long ago, was given a flower for each year of her life. Seventy-eight children died before her, and each one dropped a full blown rose into the suffragist's lap. The Boston Advertiser tells of two women, Mrs. Nellie Kimball and Mrs. Emma Hamilton, who own coal and wood yards. Both women are prospering and both attend personally to the details of the business. Miss Josefa Humpal Zeman of Chicago is the only Bohemian newspaper woman in this country, and she was recently honored by the male members of the National Slavie Press association by being elected secretary of that organization. Miss Augusta Main of New Berlin, Conn., charged with an assault with intent to kill, declared in court that there were two things in the world she hated, and they were men and dogs. "I never see either," she said, "but what I ache to kill them."

CURTAIN RAISERS. "The Cat and the Cherub" will shortly be produced in Paris. Joseph Herbert and Osman Carr have got together for work in comic opera. Charles H. Hoyt and Denman Thompson are to collaborate in a New England drama. Ollie Redpath will play the title role of "La Poupée" when Oscar Hammerstein revives that piece. Blanche Marsden is writing a sequel to her father's "The Kerry Gow," for Eugene O'Neale's use. A. C. Gunter may accede to a demand for the dramatization of "Bob Covington," his recent successful novel. Clyde Fitch has entrusted a new play, said to be of the "Jim the Penman" order, to Herbert Kealey and Effie Shannon. Mr. John Drew's engagement in "A Marriage of Convenience" at the Empire theater, New York, has been extended to Jan. 2, and he may possibly remain there until Jan. 16. As the title "A Soldier of France" is already copyrighted, Fanny Davenport was obliged to change the name of her new Joan d'Arc play, "The Saint and the Fool" was selected. Mr. E. J. Morgan, now appearing in "The Princess and the Butterfly" at the Lyceum, New York, is to support Mrs. Leslie Carter in "The Heart of Maryland" in London next spring. Anthony Hope's play, which Mr. South ern is to bring out, has been rechristened "The Adventure of Lady Ursula." An other Southern production will be Glen McDougall's stage version of "Henry Esmond."

THE WOMAN HATER. The more a man has to do with women the more he finds it necessary to lie. If a man writes her name Mae or Marie, that settles it—she can't cook. A soft, gentle, pleading voice soon becomes more tiresome than a rasping one. It is not difficult for a man to be a woman's ideal if he lives in another state. Any girl who raves over a football player will prove to be fond of gritty gooseberry pie. Women have great respect for a woman who has her hair done up by a professional hairdresser. When a woman wants to give an unhandled swipe at another woman, she makes fun of her dressmaker. Somehow it always makes a man feel like laughing to hear a woman pat his cheek for her mother as "mamma."

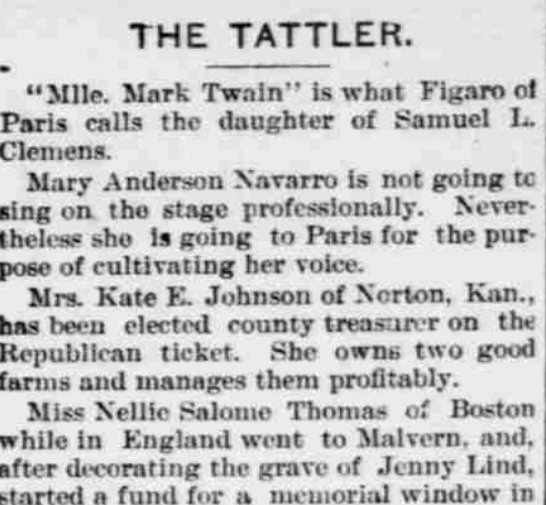

THRONE LIGHTS. Queen Victoria selected the Jewish "Chant of the Dead" as the opening voluntary for the Duchess of Teck's funeral service. The empress of Austria takes her bath every morning at 5 o'clock, which is earlier and oftener than most women do who are not empresses. The Prince of Wales has become perhaps in a recent shooting at pheasants he killed every bird he drew trigger on. The King of Greece, when conversing with the members of his family, never employs any but the English language. He seldom speaks French, and only uses Greek when compelled to do so. Foreign gossip says that Queen Olga of Greece has an anchor tattooed on her shoulder as a token of her affection for her father, the late Grand Duke Constantine of Russia, and that Princess Waldemar of Denmark, wife of the sailor son of King Christian, is also marked in like fashion, with the addition of a crown.

When a man who has neglected his health finally realizes that he is being attacked by serious illness it is no time for half-way measures. Death is an enemy that must be knocked out in the first round, or he is pretty sure to conquer in the end. A weak stomach, an impaired digestion and a disordered liver mean that a man is fighting the first round with death. Unless he manages to strike the knock-out blow, it means that death will come up in the second round in the guise of some serious malady. When a man's stomach is weak and his digestion is impaired, the life-giving elements of the food he takes are not assimilated into the blood. The blood gets thin and weak, and the body slowly starves. In the meantime the disordered liver and the sluggish bowels have forced into the blood all manner of impurities. The body hungers and eagerly consumes anything that the bloodstream carries to it. In place of healthy nutriment, it receives for food foul poisons that should have been excreted by the bowels. Continued this system of starvation combined with poisoning, will wreck every organ in the body. Naturally, the weaker organs will give way first: If a man is naturally nervous, he will break down with nervous exhaustion or prostration. If he inherits weak lungs, the consequence will be consumption, bronchitis, asthma, or some disease of the air-passages. If he has a naturally sluggish liver, he will suffer from a serious bilious or malarial attack. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery cures all disorders of the stomach, digestion and liver. It purifies the blood and fills it with the life-giving elements of the food that build new and healthy tissue. It is the great blood-maker and flesh-builder and nerve tonic. It cures 98 per cent of all cases of consumption. Thousands have testified to their recovery from this dread disease under this great medicine.
