The Individual Style

of the Double-Breasted Sack Coat marks distinctly The Star Suits. Made from finest American and English Serges. Most of them are faced with silk on the lapels as far as the button holes, excepting the Fancy Worsteds, they are plain. The prices are $10, $12 and $15.

The spacing of the buttons across the chest suggests a manliness of form which is certainly ideal, though the wearer may make it real. The stitching and staying of the edges insures a permanency short of the $20, $25 and $30 made-to-measure sort, and all this excellence, all this superb style, all this luxury of trimming, capped by the climax of perfect and satisfactory fit of the clothes themselves, which are ready-to-wear-the-moment-you-want-them. Worth looking into, isn't it?

Men's, Boys' and Children's Overcoats and Ulsters are ready for you to look at. Prices are as low as you like and as good as you want. See the new styles just received

J. R. Bangs Dead.

J. R. Bangs died Friday night at the Willow ranch in the southern part of the county after an illness of a few weeks. Mr. Bangs had been feeling poorly for some time but being a man of great natural energy he disliked to yield to his sickness but was finally forced by extreme weakness to remain in bed. Dr. Dennis was summoned from here to attend him and he pronounced the disease to be a severe type of cerebro meningitis. Every possible care was given him but it proved unavailing and on Friday night about ten o'clock he passed away. On Saturday the remains were brought to his residence here from which the funeral was held yesterday afternoon. It was conducted by Rev. C. C. Wilson and was attended by a large number of people among which were representatives of the three societies to which he belonged, the I. O. O. F., the M. W. A. and the Home Forum. Mr. Bangs was born in Jefferson City, Mo., Oct. 22, 1853. When he was still very young his parents moved to New Orleans where the family resided for several years. He was left an orphan at a very early age, his father having died in Mexico and his mother in New Orleans. After the death of his parents he made his home until manhood with his half sister who is now Mrs. John Neary. He came to North Platte in 1873 and has made his home here almost continuously since then. In 1883 he was married to Miss Sallie Harding who survives him. Shortly after he reached here Mr. Bangs commenced working with cattlemen and by his industry and frugality soon saved considerable money which he invested in stock. Ever since then he has been prominently identified with the stock interests of western Nebraska and at his death was the owner of a large herd of cattle. He served one term as sheriff of Lincoln county, "Dick," as he was familiarly known, was a whole souled man with many splendid characteristics. He was exceedingly popular and will be greatly missed.

Hartman's Holdup.

Sanford Hartman now knows by actual experience how it feels to look down the barrel of a six-shooter in the hands of a reckless man. When he went out to the barn yesterday morning to hitch up the horse and buggy with which his daughter Nellie drives to school every morning he failed to find the lap robe. Thinking that some tramp might possibly have appropriated it for bedding he climbed to the hayloft where his theory received ample proof as a tramp was lying asleep in the hay well wrapped up in the robe. Sanford wakened him up and requested him to move on and as the tramp didn't respond with very much alacrity he proceeded to emphasize his remarks with a pitchfork. In an instant the tramp pulled out a revolver and covered Sanford. In the meantime Miss Nellie Hartman, who had been assisting in the search for the robe, hearing voices in the loft climbed up to investigate. The spectacle which confronted her was rather of a thrilling one and she immediately decided that the sheriff was needed to complete the scene so she started after him at once. While she was gone the tramp left the barn but Sheriff Keliber reached the scene of action before he had gotten very far away and took him into custody. In court he gave his name as C. M. Butterworth. Judge Baldwin sentenced him to thirty days imprisonment on a bread and water fare for carrying concealed weapons and approaching the complaining witness in a menacing manner.

Patent Granted.

Messrs Ed Donehower, John Downs and John Dwyer were notified Saturday that a patent had finally been granted them upon their device for refrigerating cars without the use of ice. The matter has been pending in the patent office for several years but there seemed to be an unusual number of difficulties to overcome before the patent was granted. By the same mail the patentees also received a request from a Philadelphia firm for the lowest figures at which they would dispose of the patent. One of the patentees, Ed Donehower, is in Salt Lake City and no action will be taken concerning the disposition of the patent until his return.
