Dr. E. B. Warner laid the last brick on his new block Wednesday afternoon. The brickwork was completed in a few days less than three weeks after it was commenced. The building is now in the hands of the carpenters who are making all possible speed on their work.

The O. E. S. held a social Wednesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. W. W. Birge. The attendance was not as large as it has been at previous socials but those who were there spent a most delightful afternoon. The entertainment was largely musical. The luncheon was a very delicious one.

Mr. Joseph Smith and Miss Tillie Finney were married in Council Bluffs Tuesday evening at the home of the bride's parents. The groom is well known in North Platte as he was a fireman running on the Second district until he met with an accident several months ago which incapacitated him for that work. His many friends here wish the happy couple much joy and prosperity.

Grimes' Cellar Door will open at Lloyd's opera house Nov. 7, with James B. Mackie and big farce comedy company composing cast. Mr. Mackie will be remembered best as the original "Grimsey" in Hoyt's "Bunch of Keys," and from the emphatic success made of the part, attained the title of Hoyt's famous Comedian. In the presentation of "Grimes' Cellar Door," Mr. Mackie finds plenty of scope to display his versatility as a Comedian. His company includes Louise Sanford, Comedienne, so long identified with Hoyt's attractions, the Grimes Cellar Door Quartette, Kentucky Trio, Belle Moore, formerly with Harrigan, and a host of pretty girls, combining to make the new music and special features of "Grime's Cellar Door" more popular than ever. Prices 50 and 75 cents.

"That fellow"

is a stunning dresser, though I wonder how he can do it on his small salary."

How frequently one hears that remark about town. No doubt, if the truth were known, the person referred to instead of going to a merchant tailor and paying $20, $25 or $30 for his suit of clothes, buys one of The Star's wholesale tailored kind, for which we have made to order and knowing and studying your wants, are perfect in every detail.

These suits are as well made, as well trimmed and in nine cases out ten better fitting than those which the tailor makes to order and charges—well, any price he pleases, or he thinks you will pay.

A large cattle deal was consummated Tuesday afternoon when H. M. Winslow sold 1075 head of cattle to D. B. McNeal. The cattle have been pastured at the McNeal ranch for several months and Mr. Winslow expected to ship them to South Omaha this week had he not succeeded in disposing of them here. The cattle are all in good condition and if the market continues to be as favorable as it has been for several months the deal ought to be a very profitable one for Mr. McNeal. For the present he will continue to pasture the cattle on his ranch.

A Ghost Party.

Miss Jessie Banks entertained a number of ghosts at her home Hallow E'en. They spent the evening playing ghostly games and telling one another's fortunes in true Hallow E'en fashion. About ten o'clock the guests divested themselves of their ghostly apparel and appeared in their natural guise—that of charming young ladies. Quite a little merriment was created at the unassuming by the discovery that two boys, Clarence Dillard and Guy Robinson, had also crept in in ghostly apparel and had been divesting their voices leading every one to think they were of the gentler sex. The ghosts proved to be very substantial spirits when it came to disposing of the dainty lunch which had been prepared for their delectation and demonstrated that even ghosts enjoy the good things of this life. Those who were numbered among the guests were the Misses Mabel Orr, Edith Drake, Wilmina Derryberry, Stella Gill, Jennie McMichael, Blanche Warner, Cora and Liddie Sluder, Gertie and Mary Russell, Zella Van Doran and Clara Langford.

Lincoln county farmers still continue to invest in cattle, several small bunches having changed hands recently. The farmers who invested in cattle last spring are all well satisfied and some of them expect to branch out still farther.

A Hallow E'en Party.

The Keliher home on east Third street was the scene, Tuesday evening, of one of the jolliest Hallow E'en parties which has ever been held in North Platte, Miss Hannah Keliher being the hostess. As the guests entered the house the vision which met their delighted eyes made them think that they had been transported bodily into some enchanted country. Streamers of cheese cloth of all the colors of the rainbow were festooned around the rooms and jack-lanterns added a weird touch to the scene. The merry-makers soon discovered the purpose of the streamers as each one was asked to take a streamer's end and wind it up until the other end was found. As an incentive to rapid work they were told that two of the streamers had the proverbial "pot of gold" concealed at their ends. Miss Mae Walker succeeded in finding one "pot of gold" which proved to be a very dainty paper knife. Gus Chamberlain was rewarded for his labors with an iceman's pin. During the evening fortunes were told and the fates revealed the fact that Mr. Frank McCall is destined to remain a bachelor and Miss Nellie Austin, an old maid, until the end of their days. Three red ears of corn suspended in the archway answered the same purpose as a mistletoe and a number of fair maidens were made to pay the penalty of standing underneath them. Shortly before midnight a very delicious lunch was served. About fifty young people enjoyed Miss Keliher's hospitality and they are all of the opinion that she is a decided success in the role of hostess.
