"Remember the Maine," by Lincoln J. Carter will be produced at the opera house on February 12th. The drama is said to excel anything yet evolved by Mr. Carter in the way of scenery and effects, and to one familiar with Carteresque plays this does not seem possible. A special effort to make the production surpass his previous efforts has been fruitful of a mass of scenery consisting of moving battleships, distant cities that are to be bombarded, pictures of Lincoln—Cuban Slave—McKinley—Remember me—Dewey—The Maine—We Have Remembered the Maine.

Messrs. Grimes, Scharmann, Wilcox, Parsons, Hinman, Patterson, Hoagland, Buchanan, Becler, Baldwin and Muldoon, were the guests of E. A. Cary at a dinner party Saturday evening. Dinner was served at six o'clock and it was such a one as will long be remembered by those who were fortunate enough to be numbered among the guests. It was very charmingly served. After dinner the gentlemen enjoyed a musical treat. Major Scharmann gave a number of songs in his usual pleasing manner and Mrs. Cary played a number of very enjoyable instrumental solos. The hosts' son Robert played some violin solos which were highly appreciated by the guests. The evening was certainly one of great enjoyment for the guests.

The special train bearing the remains of Gen. Lawton, Major Logan, and Dr. Armstrong, passed through here shortly before midnight Saturday. The train consisted of a baggage car, a composite car and two Pullmans. The caskets were in the composite car which was beautifully draped with American flags. The caskets were completely covered with flowers and they were also banked up against the sides of the car. A military escort consisting of a sergeant, a trumpeter and two privates guarded the remains. Mr. Lawton and her four children, Mrs. Armstrong, Mrs. Logan and a number of relatives of the ladies were aboard the train. Mrs. Lawton and the children have been journeying continuously since December when they left Manila.

Lieutenant Breckinridge, the officer whom General Lawton was trying to assist when he lost his life was a passenger on train No. 2 Sunday, en route to Washington to attend the General's funeral. The Lieutenant is still very weak and ill from the effect of his wounds and the physicians were very much averse to his leaving the hospital but he felt that it was his duty to pay a last tribute of respect to the brave man who practically gave up his life for him. He gave the train men a very realistic description of Gen. Lawton's death.
