Eleven Inning Game of Ball.

North Platte.....20000000001-3
Omaha.....00020000000-2

That was the score by innings in the most scientific exhibition of ball playing and withal the most interesting game ever played on the local grounds. William Redfern McKee, Junior, said it was a scorching game, and the men, women and children—several hundred of them—said that William was correct.

Nine pleasant and good looking young men from the city on the banks of the Muddy, and who are employed in the Union Pacific shops, traveled 291 miles to North Platte last Friday night for the ostensible purpose of trailing in the dust the fair reputation of the North Platte ball team. Headed by the ex-league pitcher Joseph Sinchem Scully and several semi-professional players they got the idea in their think tanks that they were well nigh invincible, but they knew not what they were going up against. They did not, apparently, know that North Platte has about the only Real Thing in the state when it comes to a ball club. They had heard about us, but they were from Missouri, had to be shown, and it was our pleasant duty to show them.

We do not mean to depreciate the ability of the Omaha team, far from it, for the members are good players, and one of the most gentlemanly set of fellows we have ever seen on the diamond. They are not "kickers"; they abide with the decision of the umpire, and in this game Dan Linahan, of Kearney, filled the position in an impartial and most satisfactory manner.

The playing of the North Platte team was the most brilliant of the season; they knew from the start that they were up against a hard proposition, and as the score shows there was not an inning after the fourth when they had an "edge" over the opposing team. It was a contest in which an error might mean the loss of the game, and the tension of the home players, as well as that of the spectators, was at all times up to the highest pitch. But few errors were made by the North Platte team, and those made were at no time costly.

Bailey occupied the box for the locals and pitched a game of which all were proud. He started in with speed and maintained it through the eleven innings. While the visitors made eight hits off him, the balls were so well fielded that in only two innings of the eleven did one of their men reach third base. The North Platters proved the heaviest batters, and while for nine straight innings they did not score, they had several men reach third base and there "die." The work of the local team throughout was smooth and even; in fact it was the finest exhibition of team work ever witnessed on the local grounds. Each individual member of the home team deserves credit for his playing, and it is needless to add that the game won additional admiration for the boys and that nothing will be too good for them in the estimation of the North Platte people.

The enthusiasm of the spectators was at high pitch during the entire game, and when Ed Hauer made the winning score on a two-base hit made by Bailey pandemonium broke loose, Hauer was carried about the grounds on the shoulders of three or four men, and each man in the club had his arm almost pulled off by the enthusiastic hand-shaking which followed the game.

It was a great game and Manager McKee was justified in turning loose his 13-inch cannons in the evening.
