For the time in the history of this country the government's holding of gold this week exceeded a half billion dollars. This is the largest gold holding of any country in the world.

The warden of the state penitentiary has asked for donations of books and magazines to replace the library destroyed in the late fire. Donations should be sent direct to the chaplain at Lincoln.

If the threatened strike of the employes of the steel trust becomes a reality it will be a battle royal between capital and organized labor. The latter will have the sympathy and aid of the public, while the trust will have its powerful resources.

In a statement made to the English house of commons yesterday, the master of the exchequer stated that the Boer war had caused a deficit of fifty-three million pounds in the treasury. England may well ask if the results obtained have justified the sacrifice of life, to say nothing of the enormous expense.

PRESIDENT SCHURMANN of Cornell University and others who have sounded the sentiment of the masses in Cuba declare that there is no discontent among the people at large, that business men generally favor the Platt amendment, and that all of the trouble on the Island so far has been created by the politicians.

CHANCELLOR ELISHA BENJAMIN Andrew has been appointed as one of the delegates from Nebraska to the national conference of charities and corrections. The chancellor ought to be able to tell the conference how to transform a state university into an asylum for professors dislodged from other educational institutions.—Bee.

THE Nebraska Independent, the populist organ, denounces the act which provides for compromising with the Bartley bondsmen. To this the Omaha Bee adds: "We are inclined to agree with this and to add that we do not think a bit better of it because it was first recommended by an eminent populist, Governor Poynter, in a special message to the legislature of 1899."

Here is the way the Louisville Courier-Journal looks at it: "C. H. Dietrich and J. H. Millard, the new senators, have risen from the lowest ranks. Mr. Dietrich is the son of a German shoemaker and at the age of nine began to earn his own living. He finished his school life three years later and afterward worked on the farm, as clerk in a country store, then as blacksmith and as a wood chopper. He got a start at last and opened a store in Hastings, Neb., selling goods by day and doing his own delivery with a wheelbarrow at night. Mr. Millard also began as a farm hand, then worked in a country store and finally got into a bank, of which he is one of the owners. Both men have made fortunes and now in mature life have the opportunity for useful public service. The experience of these two bears out Mr. Carnegie's remark that the young man has as good an opportunity to win in the world as anyone ever did. It is not the opportunity, however, but the man, that determines success in life. This has been true from the beginning of time and it will always be true in spite of what socialists say."
