Last Saturday evening "Fatty" Jones and "Rajah" Johnston got into a wagon standing on the street belonging to Wm. Heise and droye around town. This inconvenienced Heise, made him somewhat wrathly and he asked the police to have the couple arrested. Special officer Tobas met Jones and Johnson later in the evening and attempted to place them under arrest, but they denied his right to arrest them without a warrant, at the same time claiming that they had violated no law. Tobas called on bystanders to assist in arresting the two men, but the latter threatened the life of any who assisted Tobas. Later Marshal Patterson came up, but finding that no warrant had been issued for the arrest of Jones and Johnson, he doubted the expediency of making a forcible arrest and attempt to do so was abandoned. Heise yesterday desired to make complaint against the men, but neither the state laws nor the city ordinances provide any clause under which they could be tried for the act they committed. Attorneys inform us that it is questionable if Tobas had any right to attempt to arrest the men. Jones and Johnson have in the past made many disturbances, and seem to take delight in doing things they should not. A continuance of their conduct will eventually land them in court and it is pretty certain that they will receive the maximum penalty prescribed by the law.
