Albert McKeown Dies.

Albert W. McKeown, who was taken to a Council Bluffs sanitarium several months ago to receive treatment for mental trouble, died Wednesday forenoon. The remains, accompanied by D. W. Baker, who went down the day before, were brought to this city yesterday morning.

The deceased came to North Platte over twenty years ago, and with the exception of a short period had resided here continuously. He was an employe of the Union Pacific and at the time when his mental complaint first developed was a freight conductor between this city and Sidney. As the trouble gradually increased he was forced to abandon work. Local physicians failed to render assistance and he was sent to the sanitarium but he gradually grew worse until death came to his relief.

Albert McKeown was a man of excellent character, kind hearted, held in high esteem by all acquaintances, and his sad ending is deeply regretted by all. To his family the sympathy of our people is extended.

MAJESTIC COOKING EXHIBIT.

Beginning with MONDAY, SEPT. 23d, and lasting the entire week, E. B. WARNER will give an exhibition of the cooking qualities of the MAJESTIC RANGE. We have planned to have an expert operator with us for the entire week and hot lunch will be served free each day during this week. Every one is cordially invited to come and see the wonderful rapidity, the saving of fuel and the simplicity of operating this range. A child can operate it with best results; it requires no expert. All ladies are specially requested to attend this cooking exhibit and bring their husbands. A special inducement to all who make a purchase of this famous Range will be awarded a complete granite cooking outfit worth $7.50 absolutely free. Remember this just lasts for the week only. We have a good number of Ranges to select from and will please all in style, prices and terms. Don't worry with that stove any longer but get a range that is fully guaranteed in every particular. After once using you will never use any other.

E. B. WARNER.

The Convict's Daughter.

The confidential clerk of a southern banker reveals in villiany, lying and forgeries because he is the rejected suitor of his adopted daughter. He wins distinction as a conspirator and hypocrite. To win the heart and hand of the girl whom he loves, but who spurns him, he resorts to every artifice to accomplish his black hearted design. His foil, for a time, is a "Weary Willie," sentenced to life imprisonment for a murder of which he is innocent. Upon forged papers and threats he compels him to serve him by swearing that the girl is his daughter. The hobo does so, but later discovers that he had actually told the truth about the matter. This fact is revealed in a letter found in a Bible. It was written by his dead wife some years prior to its discovery and establishes the identity of the girl. But this does not relieve the hobo from the desperate villian. He still pursues and threatens him. The adopted daughter and the man who she calls father confront the tramp. Rather than reveal the secret found in his dead wife's letter and thereby bring odium on the name of his only child, he says he is not her father. This act reveals a noble hearted man. The villian then sends him back to jail from which he soon escapes. He hunts up a man who confesses that he is guilty of the murder for which the "hobo" has been punished and as a restitution leaves him all his property. The tramp is soon pardoned and a rich man. He shows his noble nature by allowing the villian to be banished. His daughter is told the secret of her history and is wedded to the young man she loves. This is only an outline of the story as told in "The Convict's Daughter" a five-act melodrama by J. A. Fraser, Jr., that will be presented at the opera house, Thursday, Sept. 19.

E. W. Murphy returned Wednesday from a week's visit in Cheyenne.

Mr. and Mrs. Thayer of Wallace were in the city Wednesday shopping.
