Maurice Cronin Dead.

A telegram received in town yesterday shortly after dinner announced the death of Maurice J. Cronin at Grand Island, where he had for several years been employed as foreman of the Union Pacific round house. The cause of death was affection of the heart, and he was taken very suddenly, having been up to the day before in his usual health. Yesterday morning Mr. Cronin came home from work and went to bed. His wife heard him breathe heavily and going to his bedside attempted to awaken him. This she could not do and at once dispatched for a physician, but before the latter arrived, Maurice had passed away. Mr. Cronin was for many years a resident of North Platte, coming here about 1880, and during his residence here was employed in the capacities of fireman, engineer and later round-house foreman. The deceased was a popular man and his large circle of friends in this city deeply regret his death.

We Drink Beer.

During the year 1901 there were shipped into North Platte thirty-five carloads of beer, in addition to the consignments of less than carload lots. Figuring one hundred barrels to the car—which is about the average—we have a total of 3500 barrels, and if we figure in the small shipments we will have a total equivalent to one barrel per year for each and every person in North Platte. However, probably one-fourth of the amount shipped in was shipped out to neighboring towns and villages, so that the consumption in the city did not exceed twenty-five gallons per each individual. But even that is considerable beer, and indicates that some fellows must be getting away with a barrel each per month.

Shall try to please all that patronize me.

C. M. NEWTON.

In stating that W. J. Roche had severed his connection with the Union Pacific we were somewhat previous. He was laid off for a few days but returned to work yesterday afternoon. Mr. Roche has been employed in the local shops for over thirty years, and is regarded by all as a very capable mechanic, a good fellow, and will probably work for the Union Pacific for thirty years more. He is one of the "standbys" of the local shops.

J. E. Weir was fined five dollars and costs yesterday for rustling coal from the Union Pacific. The fine and costs totaled nine dollars.

Y. M. C. A. NOTES.

Dr. Greenlee addressed a fine body of men in the rooms last Sunday. The address was helpful and was appreciated.

Evidently our members do not want to pay library fines. Out of the hundreds of patrons, none have kept books out long enough to be fined. This is as it should be. We want these books to be read by large numbers, thus showing Miss Helen M. Gould that her splendid gift is appreciated.

Business was lively down to the Y. M. C. A. last Saturday. Thirty-seven books were drawn from the library and fifty-seven baths were given. 125 visits were made to the rooms and we believe every one of them had a good time.

State Secretary J. P. Bailey will meet with the board of directors at seven o'clock tonight.

In love with the Y. M. C. A! The firemen on the U. P. R. R. Thirty-five of them are members here.
