The republicans who are opposed to the Savage-Bartley combination are referred to by a state paper as "bolters." Well, it will be found that the "bolters" constitute nine-tenths of the republican party of the state.

Now that Savage is a dead duck, candidates for governor are springing up all over the state. There are a lot of clean, able men who can creditably fill the governor's chair, but let's have the best one of the lot.

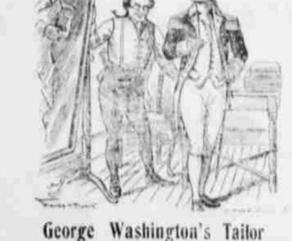

Another local instance came to our notice yesterday that more fully convinces us that no man who opposed D. E. Thompson in the senatorial struggle last winter need apply for a federal appointment. This instance, which we are not at liberty to cite, is conclusive evidence that Thompson is the "whole cheese."

EDITOR COPPER, of the Era, is so accustomed to being whipped into line that he stands appalled at the courage displayed by the republican papers in denouncing the Bartley-Savage crowd. There is this difference between a republican and a fusion newspaper: When a republican office holder commits a breach of trust his party papers demand his resignation and failing in this they assist in defeating his renomination; while the wrong acts of a fusion official are either white washed or upheld by his party papers because they dare not assert their honest opinions.

WRONG IN BOTH INSTANCES. Norfolk News: The Minden Gazette "predicts that if Governor Savage wants a renomination he will get it. The Bartley matter will furnish good excuse for some fellows to 'bolt.' The bolters should remember that Joe Bartley was the means of getting one of the beneficiaries of his misfortune off the ticket last fall." So they are already termed bolters and implied threats are necessary, are they? Well, if the Gazette's prediction holds good there probably will be a bolt and the biggest bolt the republican or any other party in this or any other state ever experienced. It will be a bolt like a tree falling off a rotten apple or a house dropping away from a defective chimney. If the corruption in the party must rule or ruin, the sooner the better, so that honest, conscientious voters may know what to do. The Gazette is wrong in one instance and in others also.

When it says "Joe Bartley was the means of getting one of the beneficiaries of his misfortune off the ticket last fall," it should be remembered that it was merely mentioned that the candidate was bound up in the Bartley transaction and these same "bolters" at once made such a disturbance that it was necessary for him to withdraw his name. The influence of the "bolters" felt then will be felt again until it is positive that none of Bartley's friends or beneficiaries are longer an influence in the party or in official position to accomplish its undoing.
