An eastern man who was in Omaha this week says that a gigantic colonization scheme is now maturing to people Wyoming, and especially the territory between Casper and the state line south to where the Union Pacific crosses the state.

HUNG UP.

The decision of Judge Baxter that a deposit of money in a bank is an investment, if interest is paid on it, and that the constitution providing that no educational funds of the state shall be invested save in United States, state or county securities, consequently, if a treasurer invests the school funds in this manner it is illegal and the state cannot claim the interest.

The fact that the successor of Mr. Meserve has been able in a few months to invest constitutionally the large sum of uninvested school funds left on his hands by his predecessor indicates that there was method in the madness of the ex-treasurer.

WEALTH WAS THE SACRIFICE.

"Pluck adorned by ambition, basked by honor bright will always command success even without the almighty dollar."

This is part of an inscription on a large card which hung in a conspicuous place in the largest wholesale notion house in the United States. It was written by Charles Broadway Roush, the founder of the business, who was known to the world as the "blind millionaire."

And in the above quotation is the secret of his success. When he went to New York City in 1865 his entire capital was only $1.80. When he died at the age of 66 he was worth millions.

"Pluck" and "honor bright" did it. He worked at least twelve hours every day, six days in the week. He was always the first at his desk, and last to leave. To him every minute counted, and he even spelled phonetically in order to save time.

But Roush paid dearly for his millions. He gained wealth and a place among the merchant princes of America, but in doing so he lost his eyesight. Over-work made him blind. He offered $1,000,000 to anyone who could restore his sight.

"Pluck" and "honor bright" will win success, but if in the pursuit of the almighty dollar all rules of health are thrown aside the millions of a Rockefeller would not be worth fighting for.

FOND OF THE WEED.

MEN AND WOMEN WHO WERE PARTIAL TO TOBACCO.

Thomas Bailey Aldrich said, "I lounge and blow white rings of smoke." Dr. O. W. Holmes and Others Who Liked Smoking.

The effect of tobacco smoking upon the intellect has been exhaustively discussed by physicians and others, and the position taken by some that it is absurd to allege that smoking is stupefying to the faculties seems to be fortified by a mass of evidence, and in this connection it may not be amiss to consider some admittedly great literary minds.

James Russell Lowell had written an ode of thanks to Charles Elliot Norton "for certain cigars," and calls it "tobacco, sacred herb." Charles Lamb was willing "for thy sake, Tobacco, I would do anything but die."

It has been said that James Russell Lowell used a number of ordinary pipes in succession and lay each aside after it had been fairly well smoked down. Later he would gather the "dottels," or, as some smokers call them, the "heels," from some half dozen of these pipes and cram them into an enormous tube and have a "real smoke," as he expressed it.

"Pluck adorned by ambition, basked by honor bright will always command success even without the almighty dollar."

When Walter McElroy is not acting as solo tenor of the Garden City Cathedral he is an engineer in charge of a couple of hundred laborers on Long Island. The other day he overheard a conversation between a couple of them: "Say, Paddy, d'ye think that Fogarty went to heaven when he died last week?"

"Goodness! I do hope our young minister won't marry that Miss Strong-mind." "I didn't think you took so much interest in him as to care very much." "I'm thinking of myself, that's all. If he marries her he'll never have a chance to talk except from the pulpit and then we'll suffer."

Mrs. Hauskeep—The dishes you have put on the table of late, Bridget, have been positively dirty. Now something's got to be done about it. Bridget—Yes, mum, as ye only had dark-colored wans, mum, they wouldn't show the dirt at all.—Philadelphia Press.

Customer—"By the way, Mr. Yorker, there was a chicken in one of those eggs." Dealer—"So? Chickens are two shillings a pound, you know, I suppose you are willing to do the right thing?"—Boston Transcript.

Loulet Is Well Protected. President Loulet is well protected. His secret guard consists of twelve men, under the orders of a police commissioner. When he receives they mingle with the guests close by him, and when he goes out they follow him and have orders never to lose him an instant from view.

Love Idealizes. All active love idealizes—that is, sees and loves the ideal of the loved one. Often, indeed, the absorption in the ideal is so complete that the outer life is mistakenly supposed to be identical with it, thus opening the way to shocks and bitter disappointments.

Woman's Life.... is hard enough as it is. It is to her that we owe our world, and everything should be made as easy as possible for her at the time of childbirth. This is just what
