The gathering of the members of the West End Card Club at the Idings' residence last evening was a particularly pleasant one. Old fashioned games were played during the early part of the evening, followed by high five. Refreshments were served on one long table, the light for which was furnished by candles set in candelabras and also in apples prepared to receive them. Salad was served in apples from which had been removed the inner part, leaving a thin cup-like shell. Sweet cider, sandwiches and cake were also served. The arrangements were unique throughout, the members were in a happy mood, and much genuine pleasure resulted.
