An Omaha man slipped and fell in a shower bath and broke his arm. This is a warning to men who insist on taking baths -

THERE is at least one labor union not strenuously opposed to Candidate Taft -the International Society of Shovelmen, to which union he has been elected an honorary member.

THE candidates for president and vice-president on the independence league ticket will probably be Hearst and Graves. The names are suggestive of a political funeral.

JUDGE KOHLBAAT, of Chicago, has decided that a railrdad cannot lawfully issue inter-state transportation in exchange for newspaper advertising. This opinion is directly opposite to the contention of the Union Pacific.

THE earnings of the Union Pacific for the year ending June 30th do not indicate that the road has been harassed by adverse legislation or that it needs any protection through the organized efforts of its employes.

POSTMASTERS in the east part of the state have been advised by the postoffice department that unless all roads covered by rural delivery are properly repaired during the summer, the withdrawal of rural delivery will probably follow. This is a warning that road overseers in Lincoln county should WATSON'S compliments to Bryan: Bryan made a mistake in dealing with the political situation in the south, and I will take advantage of this fact. He has gone to the limit in assuming upon the political help of the south. The southern states are expected to give him 156 electoral votes, almost twothirds of the necessary majority he expects to win. Yet he does not even concede to the south the second place on Hearst Scores Bryan.

Wm. R. Hearst, head of the national independence party, owned of papers in Boston, New York, Chicago and San Francisco, and who with his money and papers supported Bryan in the campaigns of 1896 and 1900, in a ecent issue of his New York American

We are bound to add, with regret, that we have lost confidence also in William J. Bryan, who by well manipulated bosship has compelled this nomination.

No reliance can be placed on the democratic platform or on Bryan's declarations. The democratic platform declares for one set of principles at one election, and for an entirely different set at the next election, while Bryan is apparently without permanent principle or sincere conviction, or even honest attitude.

A note is a promise to pay. It is valuable according to who makes it, and who endorses. A platform is a promise to perform, and a platform made by the democratic party and endorsed by Mr. Bryan is not worth the paper it is written on.

A Proxy Father-in-law

Copyright, 1908, by Associated Lit-

It was reported of the Hon, John Sharpe that he had but two fads where other schemers and speculators and owners of railroad lines had a dozen. One of his fads was the P. and G. railroad, in which he owned a controlling Interest. He knew every foot of its roadbed and kept himself posted on all

His other fad was that his daughter Edith, having finished her school days, should interest herself in the P. and G. even as he had. If she had been cut out for an old maid or a business woman she might have obeyed orders literally, but as it was she had to assume an interest she did not feel.

The Hon. John lived in Chicago, and his pet line was farther west. When tired of making money and fighting other lines on the Stock Exchange or by some sly coup, he would order the general superintendent or other official into Chicago to report details and plan improvements.

If it wasn't the general superintendent, then it was one off a division or a civil engineer and bridge builder. He had them at his house that his daughter might hear and secure experience, and when they had departed he would go over the matter again with her to make sure that she understood.

When the civil engineer engaged in building the bridge over Centiped creek was called in he and Miss Edith met. The Hon, John was in high feather that day. He had secured a mail contract over a rival line and had been told that the bridge could be built for $25,000 less than the estimated expense. He stretched his courtesy to invite the engineer to dinner and to ask Miss Edith to play the plano after

Then two or three things happened that he didn't take cognizance of, al though he was rated a keen and observant man.

From that night Miss Edith began to take more interest in railroad matters, especially in the department of bridge building, and Mr. Havens, the engineer, sent in reports that seemed to necessitate his visiting Chicago much oftener than before.

As punctually as the clock the Hon. John Sharpe took a trip over his line in his own private car every three months. Miss Edith had accompanied him twice before her sudden great interest had come to the surface, and her enfhusiasm over the third approaching trip so pleased him that he patted her golden hair and feelingly observed:

"You are your own father's daughter, after all. You will come back better posted on the railroad business than any other girl in America."

"It must take a very brainy man to construct such a bridge as I have heard and Mr. Havens talking about, she demurely suggested.

"It does, my dear-a very brainy man." "And one pretty certain to rise in the world?"

"Um-y-e-a," The Hon, John had risen in the world, and he took care to let the world know it. But he was rather opposed to any one else rising, especially anybody employed on the P, and G, road.

"Yes, Mr. Havens may rise in his profession," he reluctantly admitted, "but you must remember the social gulf now existing between us. I or you and I are the owners of the P. and G. road. Mr. Havens is an employee."

Ten days previous to the start on the third trip the Hon. John discovered something that threw him into a fervid flutter. It was not that his daughter in her enthusiasm to learn more about railroad bridge building was writing to the engineer for further information about the cantalever principle or that he in reply was telling about the tensile strength of steel and the strain put upon it under certain conditions,

It was that a feeder to his line was about to pass into other hands unless he could secure enough proxies to prevent this at the election to be held in Denver. He took off his coat and started in, and he came home one night with beaming face to say to the daughter:

"My dear girl, always remember that the first principle of railroading is to get possession of the road."

"But if you can't get enough of the stock?" she asked. "Then get the proxies. Buy, borrow or beg, but get them. It is with proxles that I shall get control of the M. and W. I need only a thousand more votes, and they are in Denver waiting for me."

The Hon. John was rubbing his hands when his car left Chicago. He enjoyed coups, and he was on his way to make one. He felt just a little sympathy for the stready routed enemy. Defeat would come with a dull thud, whereas he rather preferred something of a battle first. Proxies, my dear," he said to his daughter as he took a bundle of them from his pocket and thumbed them over-"proxies are the powder and ball to desolate the ranks of the enemy.

Blessed be proxies!" At Santa Fe business detained him half a day. He had scarcely left the We can furnish you with car when Mr. Havens made his appearance and was received with a smile and a blush.

The talk between him and Miss Centiped, but gradually came down to less scientific and more interesting

The Star Barn. things. He referred to a hint she had given him in her last letter and assured her that he had acted on it, and he solicited her permission to ask her father a certain momentous question before the day had expired. That afternoon when the train had pulled out Miss Edith fluttered around for a bit and then

"Father, what will happen if you fail to get that thousand proxies you are counting on?"

timidly asked:

"Why-why, I'd be knocked into a cocked hat, daughter. But I can't fall. I know just where they are. I shall receive a wire at the next stop. I am glad to see you so interested in the matter. Proxies are the powder and ball, and I'm sure of the proxies."

Half an hour later the Hon. John was stamping up and down the car and roaring at the top of his voice. He had received the expected wire and had been informed that the party on whom he depended had sold the stock at a sharp advance. This was the biggest setback he had received in five years. It meant a staggering blow to the P. and G. While he stamped and roared his daughter kept very quiet.

When he had got through smashing the English language he sat down hard and wiped his forehead and looked at the young lady with despairing eyes.

"Father, I don't think we are beaten yet," she said in reply.

"But we are, daughter. Those proxles are certainly in the hands of that infernal M. and W. gang, and they have got me tight. To think that I left it in the hands of Chilvers to betray me! Why, I deserve to be sent to an idlot asylum!"

"But the game may not be lost after all. You know you have been trying to make a railroad woman of me for a year past."

"But that miserable Chilvers sold out his stock on me!" shouted the father as he brought his fist down with a great bang.

"Yes, dear, but that's a part of the railroad business. If Chilvers sold his stock some one bought it, and some one has the right to vote it in the meeting tomorrow."

"But the M. and W. gang have got it, of course!"

"Perhaps. It's a part of the railroad business to find out. You didn't want me to stop at grades, sidetracks, switchbacks and bridge building, did you? My dear father, remember that the first principle of railroading is to get possession of the road, the next to keep track of stock and proxies."

"Girl, you know something," he said after a long look into her face. "Well, suppose the M. and W. gang didn't get that stock?" Heegnsped for breath and turned

"Suppose that a gentleman interested In our road got it?"

The Hon. John sat with his mouth "Suppose that a gentleman, a real nice gentleman, a gentleman interested in-in-you, got the stock with the idea of helping us out?" "By thunder, but I'd break his ribs hugging him! Out with it, girl! Don'tkeep your old dad on the books this "Well, then, Mr. Havens is in the Senta Fe to hurry the last of the MUTUAL BUILDING bridge stuff down. As he knew how much you wanted control of that feeder and as he knew how interested I was in the railroad business he-he"-But the Hon. John had sent the porter for Mr. Havens, and Edith skipped away to her stateroom. An hour later there was a knock on her door. "Say, young lady, you think you're smart, don't you?" said the father as she appeared. "I'm your daughter, you know." "Um-y-e-s! Well, I've told Havens that that bridge over the Centiped has got to be finished before there is any further nonsense. After that he will be superintendent of the P. and G., and if you learn any more about the rail-
