Sullivan, the referee appointed by the supreme court to take evidence in the litigation over the Sibley law reducing express rates in Nebraska 25 per cent, yesterday reported the act not confiscatory and recommended judgment for the state. The railroad commission tried to enforce the law two years ago but was stopped by a suit.

The boys' band has been making numerous appearances in public lately and they are creating favorable comment. The enthusiasm and vim with which they play, the tones they produce and the time and harmony of their renditions are to be admired of ones so young in years. Having brought them to their present stage by careful and conscientious instruction, Prof. Garlich is now anxious that they be properly uniformed, and to this end will probably ask financial assistance from our citizens, and as a starter the editor of THE TRIBUNE herewith offers to start the list with a five dollar bill—others can give more or less.
