Commencement Exercises.

This has been high school commencement week in North Platte. Beginning with the baccalaureate sermon Sunday evening and class day programs Monday and Tuesday evenings, the exercises closed Wednesday evening with a class address by Chancellor Davidson, of the Wesleyan University, and the presentation of diplomas by President Bullard, of the board of education.

The class day exercises Monday and Tuesday evenings were fairly well attended, and the members of the class, each of whom gave an oration, acquitted themselves in a manner that brought forth favorable mention. The program was interspersed with musical selections.

The commencement exercises Wednesday evening were more largely attended than were the class days. Following a selection by the boys' orchestra, an invocation by Rev. Chapman and a chorus by grade pupils, City Supt. Trott introduced the speaker of the evening, Chancellor Davidson, who gave one of the most interesting talks a North Platte audience had heard in years.

The subject was "The Man of the Hour," and in tracing the origin of man, the speaker may have shocked some of his orthodox hearers by his implied belief in the theory of the evolution of man. The chancellor illustrated his addresses by the recital of a number of stories which brought force to the points he desired to impress upon his hearers. The address throughout was intensely interesting and the speaker held the attention of his audience closely.

Following the address, Mr. Bullard made brief remarks to the class and then presented the diplomas. The exercises concluded with a selection by a male chorus.

To the fourteen young ladies and gentlemen who so well earned their diplomas, The Tribune extends congratulations and wishes for each a successful career in whatever vocations they may engage.
