FRIDAY, DECEMBER 3, 1909.

THE Christmas shopper should get busy. The stocks carried by North Platte merchants are now complete, more so than two weeks later. Why delay?

THOSE improvements being made by the Union Pacific at Northport ought to convince the most skeptical that Northport will be a town, notwithstanding its nearness to Bridgeport.

EVERY North Platte person who sends out a package should paste on one of those Red Cross stamps. It's a cheap way to help along the crusade against tuberculosis.

THE TRIBUNE still believes that the 1910 will be the greatest year North Platte has ever known so far as material progress is concerned. Pin your faith to the town, and you will not be disappointed.

THEY are now urging the construction of a thirty thousand ton battleship. But why stop at thirty? A ship of that tonnage will be obsolote in a few years. Anticipate the future and make them fifty thousand.

THE paramount issue in the presidential campaign of 1912, according Colonel Bryan, will be local option. It may not be the paramount issue in the presidential election, buI it is certain to cut a figure in the Nebraska campaign of 1910.

The Right Kind of Talk.

Wall street was decidedly disturbed by the decision of the United States Circuit Court against the Standard Oil company. Although not entirely unexpected, this decision emphasizes the ban which the courts are placing upon the efforts to suppress competition, says Henry Clews. Needless to say these mandates interfere materially with the plans of many industrial and financial leaders who had contemplated mergers, holding companies or other devices for circumventing the law. Such plans must necessarily be seriously interfered with, and all combinations of a monopolistic character are now wondering how the decision may affect their future welfare. It is not to be supposed that either the government or the courts are going to take extreme or unintelligent action towards the great combination of the country and more efficient and more economical than numerous small concerns. Nevertheless, it may as well be recognized at once that the government seriously intends to comply with the popular demand for adequate restraint of monopolies and great aggregation of capital. It is evident too that the courts of last resort will support this movement; and that the Sherman law, though requiring some modifications in order to make its enforcement more reasonable, will remain the law of the land. The prime intent of that measure is to maintain the open field and fair play.

Monopolies are un-American, for they conflict with such purposes and endanger the very foundation of our political institutions. The door of opportunity must not be shut and locked fast by monopoly. Competition has been the main incentive in the material development of this great nation, and the recent tendency towards its elimination, if not resisted, would rapidly lead to socialism, national decay and revolution. The political and industrial life of the nation depends very largely upon the decision of the courts on this vital question; and it is really encouraging to observe that the present drift is towards sound and well established economic principles and away from the popular fallacies which captured many light thinking or ultra-selfish people who in the pursuit of their purposes are blind to public welfare. The check upon this tendency toward monopoly and excessive centralizations of industry may, of course, be temporarily unsettling in Wall Street, but the ultimate effect even upon investments will be highly beneficial, for it will disarm much of the public criticism naturally aimed at the great corporations and monopolis which would surely continue to abuse the great power obtained without due restraint. It will be remembered that none of the calamities which were predicted in event of a decision against the Northern Securities company ever happened. On the contrary the decision was distinctly beneficial: it averted worse political agitation; and the Standard Oil decision will do likewise.

Lure of The West.

The "land show" recently held in Chicago, and which is all probability is to become an annual affair, would indicate that the various changes that have taken place in the great west within recent years have not robbed this part of the country of its lure.

Hundreds of thousands of people have wondered at exhibits from the west—not exhibits of cowboys and stage coaches, and Indians in their savage attire, but displays from fields and orchards. Western grains and fruits have been gazed upon by a multitude that gave no thought to the old stage coach, and prosperous and unromantic looking ranchmen have held the center of the stage to the exclusion of the cowboys and "bad man."

It is evident that, fascinating as the old west has been, the new west is going to hold a greater lure. The process of making the old trails into modern roads has not killed public interest in the vast country whose hills and plains have been haunted with the spirit of romance. The west has changed its call, but the new note is even more apealing than the old. It still holds its lure for those who gaze from afar, and apparently it is always to be the Promised Land where bounties never fail.—Denver Republican.

Obituary.

Owing to an oversight, notice of the death and burial of Thos. W. Hughes did not appear in last week's paper. Deceased was well known in this city, having been employed by the U. P. Railroad Company at this place from 1883 to 1901.

At the time of his death he was a conductor on the O. S. L. and made his home at Glenn's Ferry, Idaho. The accident, that took his life, occured at Mountain Home. Mr. Hughes was married on January 15, 1890 to Miss Jessie Baker, of this city. He was a member of the local lodges of the B. of L. F. and O. R. C., both of which were represented at the funeral by members and floral offerings. Deceased is survived by his wife and four children, also his mother, three brothers and a sister, all of whom were present at the funeral.

Mrs. Hughes and children will make their future home in this city. The mother lives in Hastings, the sister Mrs. D. C. Congdon, of this city. The brothers reside, Edward, in Pocatello, Idaho, Frank, in Hastings, and Oscar, in Red Cloud.

The funeral was conducted by Rev. George F. Williams at the Presbyterian church and was attended by a large number of people, including representatives of the railway orders from Glenn's Ferry. Interrment was made in the North Platte cemetery.

When Man Was a Marine Animal.

It was M. Quintan, a French physiologist, who several years ago wrote a paper to show that the colorless fluid in which the red corpuscles of our blood float and which is called the "blood serum" is the same fluid as that which constituted the primeval sea. The earliest forms of life which floated in the primeval sea were such that the cells and tissues of which they were constituted were always bathed by this primeval fluid. When silics became a constituent of the sea these animals may have coated themselves with silicious coverings, but many of their cells were still bathed by the fluid, and some of them as they passed from the sea to the land may have closed up their alimentary canals, so that a distinction arose between their internal organs and their outer superficies, but still, for the good of their cells, they still bathed them in the saline fluid. To do so more effectively they took the saline fluid ashore with them in the form of a blood serum, and it is this blood serum which we carry about with us today, the most evident relic of the age when we were marine animals.

German Dialect In Wisconsin.

It is two German women who are speaking in the presence of an Irish woman.

"Th' tap o' th' mornin' t' ye, Mis' Brettschneider. 'Tis glad I am t' see th' likes av ye. Iss yer daughther Gretchen goin t' the Hill th' morrow?"

"Faith an' she is. Ven me bye Heinrich can get th' bay haarse away from th' plowin' I t'ink I'll go mesilf, bedad."

This is not travesty. It is a report of German dialect. The manner of speech came about naturally enough. When the Germans arrived here in full force the country was already settled, largely by Yankees and Irish, and the German had to buy his farm here or there. Thus a number of them found themselves located in the town of Erin, where, of course, they learned the language of the country. And I leave it to my fellow citizens in Wisconsin whether a German cannot speak as broad and rich a brogue as any son of Erin.—Charles D. Stewart in Atlantic.
