Letter from Carroll Chambers.

Carroll Chambers, now at Little Rock, Ark., in a letter to The Tribune says: "My trouble is not as serious as at first supposed. I have been compelled to stop school for a time. My trouble was caused by overwork and abuse of eyes by studying in poor light. The sight of the right eye is only onethird what it should be, and the left is somewhat less affected. A slight brain tumor has developed as a result of increased cranial tension and an operation may be necessary. I am hoping, however, that with complete rest and the treatment I am now taking my eyes will so improve that I may be able to continue my college course next year. The idea of blindness was not pleasant to entertain at first, and I dislike to have any of my friends think that I am to be put down and out this early in the game."
