Midsummer Hats

JUST for the heads of youth and loveliness, one of that small company of designers who make Paris the top of the world (in millinery), has given to us these three things of beauty for the summer girl. They look so simple! And they are in reality only broad-brimmed leghorn and hemp shapes with plumes and ribbon, or flowers and ribbon, for garniture. But their simplicity is only seeming. It is the result of a deep study of lines by a gifted artist. It is like the simplicity of a perfectly plain and perfectly fitted, tailored coat, a thing difficult of achievement.

These broad brims, droop and lift, flowing about the face and head in lines that make us wonder and envy, not at their own sweet will, but by the careful calculation of the mind that planned them. They are, indeed, fitted to the face and head. They compel us to note how they silhouette an exquisite profile, or point to the fine line of the eyebrows, or play up the depth of the eyes or veil half the pretty face in mystery.

The Grand Prix, where millinery and horses triumph—but mostly millinery. It would surely hold its own in any meeting of those who make dress a study and vie with one another in display. Happy the bride or bridesmaid who may indulge herself in its counterpart. It is a hat for high occasion. There are four long, but not heavy, plumes, more like a soft mass of snow than anything else in nature. There is almost no curl in the long fibers. Such a hat never was and never will be out of style.

The third hat is more distinctly of the season. It has a bell-like brim with irregular edge and a fairly tall crown. Four long plumes are mounted at the right under a bow that is more than large. They fall completely over the crown, to the left brim. One half the face is in shadow from the sharp droop of the brim. This hat is almost universally becoming.

All these hats are set on the head in the proper position. It will be noticed that the pose is dignified—not rakish. The crowns are posed as they should be, directly on top of the head. It is the modeling of the brims that gives each hat its individuality and makes each extraordinary. As studies in midsummer high art millinery they must interest everyone. Those who would like fac-similes of any one of these must consider whether their features are of the same class or not, and remember that the rest of the toilette must play up to the hat. Such millinery is immensely useful for it is brimming over with good suggestions, which we will do well to follow—some of them at a discreet distance.

PRETTY FOULARD WAIST

This simple waist is of dotted fouldard, white ground, with blue dots. It is trimmed on each side of the front with a band of embroidery in colors, bordered with rolls of liberty.

The full front is of white silk voile; the collar and sleeve ruffles are of lace.

Take Good Care of Your Gloves. Gloves are another item about which many do not concern themselves sufficiently. A soiled glove looks as badly as a soiled collar, yet no one would think of wearing the latter, whereas gloves that reek with dirt and germs are worn with the greatest disregard for appearance and hygiene.

Fastidious women find the chamolite glove a delightful substitute for the regular kid, as it can be washed when soiled, wears as well as any other, and is much more comfortable. Gloves, like stockings, should be mended the moment they begin to show wear; in fact, every garment requires constant inspection to keep it in condition and always ready for use.

SUMMER BEDROOM IN COLORS

Soft Shade of Green One of the Most Appropriate That Can Be Devised.

A beautiful green room of a summer cottage has been produced with green woodwork in one of the restful sage-green tints, the walls papered in a plain cartridge paper, with a frieze of stray vines, all in different shades of the same cool color.

The wicker furniture is finished in a forest green stain and the carpet is covered with a green and white rug of fine, jointless matting. Sheer white mull curtains hang at the windows with straight-falling draperies of liberty silk of the same color over them. A white porcelain bedroom candlestick four feet high stands at the head of the bed. It is a straight column resting on a square block base, the fluted finish outlined in green. It holds a large green wax candle, at the side of which is a little holder for a box of matches. Other fittings of the room carry out the green and white scheme, and as the apartment faces the south, the effect has been to temper its high light and contribute a restfully subdued tone.

Black Jewelry to the Fore. Black jewelry is threatening a return to extensive vogue. Whenever any calamity abroad brings a prominent part of the populace into mourning black jewelry is sure to come around again.

Persons who remember the death of the prince consort tell interesting tales of the extent to which the craze went at that time. Everybody wore black ornaments, and jet. Jet is already in high esteem with the powers that direct the wardrobe and has been for a year or more, but the manufacturers are getting ready for a still greater demand for it than they have seen for two generations at least.

Salt For Freckles. If you are troubled with freckles try putting a teaspoonful of salt in a basin of water and bathing the face with it. Do this occasionally and see how quickly they will fade.

Taft GREETED TEDDY

CHIEF EXECUTIVE AND HIS PREDECESSOR AT BEVERLY.

A VERY CORDIAL GREETING

Manifestations that Left Not a Single Doubt as to the Exuberance of Feelings.

Beverly, Mass.—For a full minute Thursday afternoon President Taft and Colonel Roosevelt stood on the broad veranda of the Evans cottage with hands upon each other's shoulders while delight shows in every line of the smile-enraptured countenances.

"Mr. President," It was Roosevelt who spoke, and there was earnest warmth in his salutation. "Theodore!"

They patted each other affectionately on the shoulder. They laughed in a way that left not a single lingering doubt as to the exuberance of their feelings. They seemed utterly oblivious of the fact that there were others present.

"It used to be 'Mr. President' and 'Will,' didn't it?" the colonel cried in his old familiar high-pitched voice, "but now its 'Mr. President' and Theodore."

The two friends, meeting after sixteen months' separation, with all the warmth that used to characterize their association in Washington, slapped each other again on arms and shoulders. And so it went throughout the afternoon.

When Colonel Roosevelt was president and Mr. Taft was secretary of war the meetings of the two men at Washington always were characterized by the same cordiality as that of today. While house attaches who witnessed the greeting this afternoon said it was just like the old days, there also was a rapid fire of conversation. The meeting was everything that the friends of President Taft have claimed that it would be and the persistent prophecies of those who have insisted all along that a coolness had developed between the two men proved to be fallacious.

Colonel Roosevelt was in the spirit of the renewed association with the president, when, after two hours and twenty minutes spent with Mr. Taft and members of his family, he started back to Nahant to spend a second night with Senator Lodge.

As he was leaving the shaded grounds of the president's cottage the colonel stopped to speak with several old newspaper friends, from Washington.

"I had an exceedingly pleasant time with the president," he exclaimed, "There is nothing particular to say, is there, Cabot?" turning to Senator Lodge.

"No, I think not," put in the senator. "We had a delightful time and that is all there is to it," the colonel added.

"By George, look at those miscareants," he exclaimed as several photographers who had climbed on a stone wall for a vantage point began to click their cameras with a perfect fusillade of snapshots.

"Does Beverly come up to Oyster Bay?" someone asked. "You know I am fond of Oyster Bay," he replied, "and I don't want to make any comparisons, but, by George, Beverly is beautiful. This whole north shore is perfectly lovely."

With a wave of his Panama hat and a hearty word of goodbye he was off.

FIGHTERS ARE READY.

Jeffries and Johnson in Prime Condition for the Set-to.

Reno.—James J. Jeffries and Jack Johnson are ready to fight. Both men completed their long training work Thursday and will merely do light exercises through the three days that will elapse before they face each other in a twenty-two-foot ring to fight out the heavyweight championship of the world.

"I am ready. My training is finished. With the exception of a sprint now and then to keep myself in shape, I will do no more work," said Jeffries. While Jeffries lolled away the hours with trout rod or cards, Johnson worked faithfully. Under the eye of the moving picture camera he toiled through a day of gymnasium stunts, boxing and posing. For the day the spot light of public attention was his and he basked in its rays with apparent enjoyment.

Named for Senator. Grand Forks, N. D.—Porter J. McCumber, stalwart, and A. J. Gronna, insurgent, have been nominated in the North Dakota republican primaries for the United States senate, McCumber succeeding himself and Gronna succeeding the late M. N. Johnson.

Cut small pieces cheese in pan or chaffing dish, then add three-fourths amount of milk until entirely melted, then season; add yolks of eggs last.

Intuition. "Henry, how do you like my new hat?" "Well, dear, to tell you the truth—" "Stop right there! If you're going to talk that way about it, Henry, I don't want to know!"

LIKES HAWAIIAN PRINCESS

Washington Society Finds Delegate's Wife Rapidly Adapts Herself to its Usages.

Washington.—One of the most striking figures in Washington official life is "Princess" Kalani'aoale, wife of the delegate from Hawaii. Since the election of "Prince Cupid," as he is popularly known, to congress, ten years ago, he and his wife have established a reputation for hospitality and have made a large circle of friends.

"Princess" Kalani'aoale, to give her the Hawaiian title, never fails to attract much attention at social functions. She is a fine type of Hawaiian womanhood and dresses sumptuously in the brilliant colors of which her countrymen are so fond. She is unusually tall and carries herself in the regal manner which is characteristic of her people. Princess Kalani'aoale is fond of society and has readily adapted herself to Washington social conditions.

Before her marriage to the scion of Hawaiian royalty Princess Kalani'aoale was Elizabeth Kahanu Kaauwai, daughter of a native chief of the island of Maui. Her marriage to "Prince Cupid," October 8, 1896, was the occasion of great rejoicing throughout the islands.

Princess Kalani'aoale was educated in English schools and took a finishing course in France. She is a thorough linguist, an artist of no small ability and an especially fine musician. She has been largely instrumental in creating a vogue for Hawaiian music.

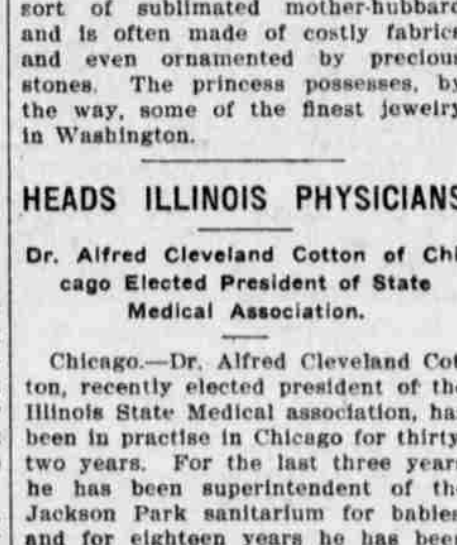

The native instrument of Hawaii, a variety of guitar which lends itself readily to Kanaka folk music, is frequently heard in the drawing room of the fine residences in Massachusetts avenue maintained by the Kalani'aoales. Former Queen Liliuokalani of Hawaii, the aunt of "Prince Cupid," is a much feted guest when she comes to visit her young relatives.

Princess Kalani'aoale has a fine collection of native jewelry and curios. Among them is the war helmet of the national hero, Kalakaua I. Some bits of pottery which she possesses are of untold antiquity and are highly valued by collectors. The "ho'uka," the native dress of the Hawaiian women, is shown in great variety in a collection made by Princess Kalani'aoale. The garment is a sort of sublimated mother-hubbard and is often made of costly fabrics and even ornamented by precious stones. The princess possesses, by the way, some of the finest jewelry in Washington.
