Unconfirmed reports from the summer home of President Taft are that he will get rid of some of the barnacles which have been sticking closely to the administration ship. According to these reports Secretary Ballinger will hand in his resignation September 18th, and Senator Aldrich and Speaker Cannon are to be eliminated from the councils of the party.

A gain of more than half a million dollars' a week in the government's ordinary receipts during the first six weeks of the present fiscal year, as compared with the corresponding period last year, has been announced by the treasury department. The ordinary disbursements for the same period show one million dollars less for the current year. The ordinary transactions embrace all outside Panama canal, public debt and miscellaneous transactions.

Seizure of 185,800 ice cream cones was made in Omaha Saturday morning by United States Deputy Marshall Haze under the direction and at the request adulterant and alleged by the department of agriculture to be a harmful poison in food stuffs. This is the largest single seizure of cones ever made, the total bulk amounting to more than half a carload. Previous to this time the record seizure was made in New York city, the number of cones in that case being 102,000.

It may be generally known that the number of crippled children in the United States has been enormously in creased during the last year or two by the epidemic of infantile spinal paral ysis. Dr. Orr estimates that the state of Nebraska alone acquired between 250 and 300 cases requiring treatment in the last year from this cause. The total number in the state he believes to and fifty and a thousand. The Orthopedic hospital is now caring for about sixty. The need for the development of this institution is only faintly appreciated by the general public.

A Visit to Brady. From North Platte to Brady Island is o great distance in these days of rapid railroad travel; for one is no sooner comfortably seated in a car than the train moves. The city is soon left behind and the bridge over the Platte river, and the open prairie gained, and from the car windows, one watches the landscape flash by like a panoramic view. Maxwell was soon reached and a short stop made; then with a snort and a shriek, the giant locomotive was off again, and the village with its historic associations was left behind. Fields of corn and small grain did not look in such a deplorable condition as expected, but it was evident they were suffering from the effects of the recent dry weather. The straw of the small grain seemed short, and where it was cut, it was raked into heaps, being too short to bind in sheaves. However, with all drawbacks, I was informed that it will yield from nine to eleven bushels per acre in the vicinity of Brady. When the train drew up at Brady, the depot was all but deserted, and I was left to contemplate the little town nestling at the foot of a range of sand hills to the north.

After breakfasting at the Brady restaurant on Main street, I set out to explore the somewhat straggling, and not over compactly built town, and felt surprised at the absence of shanty erections, and the number of substantial, tasteful residences of well-to-do Brady citizens

Brady has a commodious, well lighted two storied school building which would of Henry B. Evans, federal food and be a credit even to a much larger town; drug inspector. The charge is made but it is well out on the prairie, and it that the cones contain boric acid, an is a question if the town will ever get beyond it. There are six teachers engaged in the several grades, and the result of their work last term is highly gratifying. Beside the school, there are two churches, one Catholic, and one Methodist, which are in different districts, and as far apart as the tenets of their creeds. Both are neat frame buildings, and fairly well patronized.

There are also two banks housed in humble enough buildings on Main street; one is called the Bank of Brady, and the other the Brady State Bank. On the window of the latter it is announced in large letters that it has $10,-000.00 capital. There is one newspaper, the Brady Vindicator, which keeps watch and ward over the interests of the three-hundred and fifty inbe somewhere between seven hundred habitants of the little town. I called on the editor, and met with a cordial reception, and when leaving inflicted upon him some verses criticising the dryness of the Brady atmosphere, which he appreciated.

To accommodate a large business, they occupy several commodious and well arranged stores packed with every requirement for the farm and home. Mr. O'Rourke, it may be remarked, is a son of the late Col. O'Rourke, the first superintendent of the National Cemetery near the site of old Fort McPherson. His good wife is a daughter of the late John Neary. They reside in a beautiful home, and their two daughters, verging on womanhood, did all they [could to make my visit pleasant. Besides O'Rourke & Kratzenstein, there is another firm that tuns hardware and implements, and also a neck yoke and harness factory. On the whole, Brady is a town-almost wholly depending upon agriculturiste, and cattle ranches for trade, but it

A Roaring Lion By M. QUAD Copyright, 1910, by Associated Lit erary Press.

Circus bills were pasted up on the barns all along the highways, and on a certain date the affair was to open at Dyersville for an afternoon and evening performance. On the evening of the day that Zeb Scott first saw the pictures he laid out his program. He was a farmer's bired man. He was in love with and engaged to Nancy Smith, the daughter of another farmer. He called to tell her the news and invited her to go to the circus.

He expected Nancy to enthuse, but she didn't. On the contrary, she looked very sober. It so happened that this was the first circus to come along since they had been engaged. Zeb knew her for a rather serious minded girl, but just how serious he was about to find out. When he had stopped for breath he was amazed to hear her say: "I can't go to the circus with you, Zeb. It would be encouraging wickedness to do it." They argued the matter for two hours, and then Zeb went home in the sulks. Nanny utterly refused to go to the circus. All other people for five mlles around might go, but it was home for her. The father and mother stood neutral. The mother said: "Mebbe some folks can see a woman in spangles and not want to come home and set a neighbor's barn afire, but what's the use in gittin' in the way of temptation?"

In two days Zeb was back to talk matters over again, but he had no better luck. He even came the third time, and he was armed with a long list of "good" people who were going to attend the show, but he met with the same objections. Then he lost his temper and reached for his hat with the remark that any girl who was too all fired good to go to a circus was too good for him.

The circus was a great success. In addition to the regular performance a llon escaped from his cage and got out into the country, and as he was not recaptured the excitement was great. Zeb had a good time, but he was conscience stricken. He had been mean. and he realized it and wanted to make up. How was he to do it? This question bothered him for the next fortnight. He could not go over and beg forgiveness and trail his pride in the dust, and as far as he could ascertain Nanny Smith wasn't going into a decline on his account. He was lying on his back in bed one night when the thought suddenly came to him-that lion! As a matter of fact, the beast hadn't heard of it and were anxious by day and sitting tight after sundown. Before morning came Zeb had his plan. Before noon he had shared it

But how shall we account for this steady driving of autoits own life as readily as our American others?-Journal.

During the past week the price of steel has been cut, in at least one instance. One large western railroad, name not announced, has bought 20,000 tons of steel at $26.50, a reduction of $1.50 per ton from the price set by the steel trust in 1901. So far steel authorities say this is the first cutin price made by American mills since the trust price was fixed. This reduction in the price was forced by foreign mills under-bidding American mills and securing a contract for 15,000 tons from Mexican railroads. This steel was shipped by water from Belgium and delivered on the Pacific coast of Mexico. Competiton that threatened to deliver Belgian rails on the west coast of United States at a less net price than the steel trust rate.

Is the Pace Too Swift?

Cardinal Gibbons deplores the extravagance of the present day, which seems to him not very unlike that of Rome while the empire was toppling to its fall. "After several months in Europe," says Benjamin Ide Wheeler, president of the University of California, "I could scarcely fail to be impressed with the difference in manner of living in this country and abroad. Our living has been forced to an artificial plane. We are tremendously extravagant. We have been pushed, under forced draft, upon an artificial staging. The whole structure is of such abnormal character that the country is imperiled."

Whatever may be accepted explanation, the fact of extravagant expenditures on the part of Americans cannot be questioned. The extravagance, moreover, is not confined to private exat a dangerous rapid rate.

with a son of his employer. There was a bit of a lake on Farmer Smith's land, and at one point he had built a summer house. It was Nanny's favordown and the gloaming come on. The roaming, roaring lion had kept her away for a few evenings, but as he had not appeared and devoured her her courage gradually returned. Zeb had builded on that summer house. He had his eagle eye that way as he milked the cows on this particular evening. He saw the pink dress as it crossed the meadow. The gloaming came, the robin sang his last notes before going to bed, and then Zeb and his fellow conspirator moved.

In pensive silence Miss Nanny Smith sat in the summer house fighting mosquitoes and wondering how wicked the circus had made Zeb when there came a sudden alarm. From a lot of bushes not far away came bloodcurdling growls and a man's shouts, and she was hardly on her feet before Zeb dashed up, club in hand, and called out:

"Back into the house! "Tis the lion Back, and I will die here to save you!" "Oh, Zeb-Zeb"-

"Back, girl-he is coming!"

And the lion came. That is, he seem ed to come. His growlings and roar ings were something dreadful to hear. He moved this way and that; he ad vanced and retreated; he rolled over and over on the grass. But the brave Zeb could not be bluffed. He stood in front of the house and swung his club and cried to that lion to come on if he dared. Finally, at the end of about ten minutes, he suddenly rushed towns, it has a telephone system, and into the darkness, pounded with his club and returned to Nanny to say:

"He has fied, and you are saved Good night, Miss Smith!"

"Oh. Zeb, you can't go!" she appealed "But I must. I ask no thanks for the triffe I have been able to render you.'

"But I can't let you go. You must come to the house. Say, dear, I really wish I had gone to the circus with vou.

"But you wouldn't go. You kept talking about spangles all the time, while I never intended to see spangles. I just went to study the Bon and the best place to hit him with a club if I was ever attacked. I found the best place was the nose, and I rushed in on him and whacked him one. Miss Smith"-

"I'm Nanny, and you come right along! Why, Zebby, if there's a circus every week after this"

And next morning Zeb handed his coconspirator a dollar bill and said:

"Jim, that was the best growling I ever heard, and if you ever go and give it away I'll foller you all over the state to break your neck!"
