"Her Husband's Wife," says the New York Journal, "is a play that will hold the interest of every woman, young or old, pretty or plain, married or single. It tells a story that will amuse and instruct; that will open the eyes of every man, husband, brother or father. Irene Randolph, the wife, is a hypochondriac. There is nothing in the world the matter with her, but she has decided that there is, and she prepares to die. She is solicitous about her handsome, six feet two husband, and determines that he shall be happy, but not too happy, when she goes. Then the wife wakes up. She realizes her danger. She forgets her fancied ills, and she enters into a most absorbingly interesting fight to get back the husband. The story of this duel between the woman who thought she was going to die and didn't, and the plain girl who made herself charming, when her pride was touched, is a lesson for all of us husband's wives, spinsters, hypochondriacs and all." Henry Miller will present this delightful comedy at the Keith Theatre, on Friday, Sept. 16th, for one night only, appearing himself in the leading role, and supported by the same brilliant cast associated with him during the New York and Chicago runs last year.

Are You a Live One?

Then Dress for the Part.

It doesn't make any difference what your line is, whether you are the head of the house or still working your way up, there is no reason why you can not improve your prospects, your self respect and your intentions, and consequently your actual daily work, if you carry a little energy and good judgement with you when you go to buy your clothes.

Pride, birth, breeding, education and natural manner are all good, but you can help them a good lot if you will dress as well as your purse will permit.

"Miller Made" Clothes are for just such a man as you. A live one, a man who has good, red blood in his veins; a man who is ready to work, fight and win.
