The Curious Electric Eel.

The electric eel, which is common in the streams of Brazil, is possessed of a natural electric battery—a tremendous one. Beneath the skin are two pairs of peculiar little bodies passing longitudinally along the muscles and near the tail. One pair is next to the back and the other near the lower fin. These bodies are made up of a great number of little cells, two or three hundred of them, and plentifully supplied with nerves. Examination of one of these electrical organs has shown that in action it is very much like a galvanic battery, with the anterior extremely positive, the posterior negative and the current only discharged at the point of contact with an object. This has been proved to be so powerful when complete that chemical compounds are decomposed by it and steel needles magnetized.

The ladies of the Baptist church will hold a chicken supper in the Masonic hall on next Tuesday evening, Dec. 20th, to which the public cordially invited.
