City Physician Quigley says this is the first winter since he became a resident of town that we have not had a run of scarlet fever, diphtheria and whooping cough among children. The only infectious disease has been a few mild cases of small-pox. Dr. Quigley attributes the lack of infectious diseases among children largely to the fumigation of the school buildings.

Photographer VonGoetz moved his studio yesterday to his new quarters over Newton's store, the rooms formerly occupied by the Commercial Club. He has a roomy and well appointed studio.

G. W. Diener returned last night from the Rio Grand valley of Texas where he went two weeks ago with others. He thinks there is money to be made in land investments in that country, as the section is strongly boomed. Among those who accompanied Mr. Diener from this section were Messrs. Soderman, Carlson, Santo, Torpell, Douglas, Louden, the Wright brothers and the Gamble brothers. Some of these are still in Texas.

Nebraska is not known as a wool-producing state, hence it may surprise some to learn that 250,000 sheep were sheared in the state last year with an output of 1,625,000 pounds in fleeces. There is no reason why there should not be many thousand of flocks in the state, but the day of farm flocks has not yet come, and probably will not until the sheep ranges of the mountain states have been taken up and converted to other uses.

Members of the A. B. Club and their husbands, twenty in number, passed a delightful evening yesterday as the guests of Mrs. H. C. Brock and Mrs. Geo. W. Finn at the home of the former. High five was the entertaining feature and very merrily did the games progress. The refreshments served at the close received the compliments of the guests.

Citizens are responding liberally with donations for the purchase of a site for the proposed Carnegie library. Over half the needed two thousand dollars has been subscribed, and it is believed the full amount can be raised without much trouble. Buchanan & Patterson headed the list with five hundred dollars, several other citizens have subscribed one hundred dollars each, and others fifty dollars each. The progressive men of the town realize the benefit the library will prove, and are showing it by their subscriptions. This writer figures that the library will be worth to his red headed boy ten times what it will cost him, the writer, in taxes to maintain it.

When buying a cough medicine for children bear in mind that Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is most effectual for colds, croup and whooping cough and that it contains no harmful drug. Sold by all dealers.

Christian Church.

The C. E. Social Friday evening at Mr. Greeson's was well attended and all enjoyed themselves greatly. Refreshments were served.

All the services at the church were well attended. The Bible school attendance is climbing upward slowly in spite of so much sickness.

The small room was well filled with Endeavors and their friends at the Endeavor's services. Two members were received into the society.

"Christian Education" was the morning theme in which the minister emphasized the need of protecting and developing the Spiritual nature of our boys and girls. An offering was taken for Cotner University.

In the evening "Life's Greatest Calling" was the subject of an address in which the ministry was exalted as the greatest calling in life, a calling in which there is more real joy and satisfaction, greater real values and returns than any other calling.

In the Christian church there is a great demand for more consecrated men who will give themselves to the ministry. An appeal was made to the young men to honestly consider the ministry in making their choice of a vocation for life.

A Famous Parlor Maid.

Sydney Smith, the famous author and wit, in describing his early married life in a Yorkshire parsonage told how he made a butler out of a village girl:

"A manservant was too expensive, so I caught up a little garden girl made like a milestone, christened her Bunch, put a napkin in her hand and made her my butler. The girls taught her to read, Mrs. Sydney to wait, and I undertook her morals. Bunch became the best butler in the county."

But Bunch was not merely butler—she was valet too. A visitor thus describes her:

"Coming down one morning, I found Bunch pacing up and down the passage before her master's door in a state of great perturbation."

"What is the matter, Bunch?"

"Oh, ma'am, I can't get no peace of mind till I've got master shaved, and he's so late this morning!"

"This 'getting master shaved' consisted in making ready for him with a large painter's brush a thick lather in a huge wooden bowl as big as Mambrino's helmet, which she always considered as the most important avocation of the morning."

A Valuable Work.

On sale at the book stores of C. M. Newton and H. W. Rincker; Price $1.25; "North Platte and its Associations." This work is neatly bound and illustrated, and tells of stirring incidents that took place when North Platte was a rough frontier town, and traces the progress of the city since that time. Associations of Cottonwood Springs and Fort McPherson are treated at length; and accounts of Indian atrocities and battles given. On the whole, this book ought to find a place in every home in North Platte.

The Tea Chewers.

"Chewing tea comes from Siam," said a traveler. "They call it mieng. It is in a plug, like chewing tobacco, and it has a villainous smell. This smell is due to the fermentation it has undergone. The tea that the Siamese employ for chewing purposes is a very coarse, rank plant. It is gathered like ordinary tea, but the leaves after being compressed into plugs are buried for fifteen days. They ferment during burial. On their resurrection they are very, very fragrant indeed. The Siamese boatmen chew tea. The rickshaw men chew it. The literateurs chew it. This is probably the truth, for I chewed a plug myself in Anam, and it exhilarated me strangely. But the aftermath was bad—a headache, smarting eyes and nervous depression."—Washington Post.

When Tolstoy Tried to Fly.

From earliest childhood Tolstoy was remarkably observant of the things that were going on in the world around him. Thus, while still in his teens, we find him taking an interest in the art of flying that was too practical to suit his devoted mother. With characteristic thoroughness he invented a design of his own and with equally characteristic courage proceeded to put it to an immediate test from a second story window. But the boy, who was afterward to find food for thought for the whole civilized world, was not destined to make his mark as an infant aeronaut. He fell instantly to the ground, and though by great good fortune no bones were actually broken, the concussion was so great that young Tolstoy afterward slept for sixteen hours on end.

Jay For Johnny.

Johnny's mother was telling Johnny stories from Bible history. And Johnny for a long time was very silent. At last he sighed and looked up questioningly into his mother's face.

"When I get to heaven shall I know every one?" he asked.

"Yes, indeed," answered his mother.

"Napoleon, and Samuel, and George Washington, and Solomon, and—and David?" persisted Johnny.

"Certainly, dear!"

"Well, then, mother, if I'm very good—if I'm ever so good and ask him ever so nicely, do you think that David will let me touch his slingshot—just touch it—once?"—Philadelphia Times.

Death.

Death, the dry pedant, spares neither the rose nor the thistle, nor does he forget the solitary blade of grass in the distant waste. He destroys thoroughly and unceasingly. Everywhere we may see how he crushes to dust plants and beasts, men and their works. Even the Egyptian pyramids, that would seem to defy him, are trophies of his power, monuments of decay, graves of primeval kings.—Hetzrich Heine.

Pa's Idea.

"What was the trouble at the building of the tower of Babel, pa?"

"I'm not certain, but I think it was between the union and the nonunion workmen."—New York Press.

Tamed Him.

"Slip me a brace of cackles," ordered the cheery looking young man with a bored air as he perched on the first stool in the lunch room.

"A what?" asked the waitress as she placed a glass of water before him.

"Adam and Eve flat on their backs! A pair of sunny sliders!" said the young man in an exasperated tone.

"You got me, kid," returned the waitress. "Watcha want?"

"Eggs up," said the young man.

"E-g-g-s, the kind that come before the hen or after, I never knew which," "Why didn't you say so in the first place?" asked the waitress. "You'd 'a' had 'em by this time."

"Well, of all things!" said the young man.

"I knew what he was drivin' at all the time," began the waitress as the young man departed. "But he's one of them fellers that thinks they can get by with anything. He don't know that they're using plain English now in restaurants."—Kansas City Times.

Knew Just How.

Many years ago in Paris at the first presentation of a tragedy that had for its closing scene the murder of a Swedish king which had taken place nearly half a century earlier all went well till the murder scene came on, when a very dignified old gentleman in the stage box showed signs of strong dissatisfaction and at length called out angrily:

"Absurd! They've got it all wrong!"

The manager himself heard this plain spoken comment, and, being naturally disturbed by so sweeping a condemnation, he sought out the critic and politely begged to know what fault he had to find with it.

"Why, my good sir," cried the old man, with an air of authority, "the whole grouping of the scene is incorrect! You have made them kill the king to the right of the door, whereas we murdered him on the left!"
