The initiative and referendum bill passed the senate Wednesday without a dissenting vote. Senator Jansen of Gage and Senator Varner of Nemaha, both Republicans, explained their votes and stated that they thought the bill was to lose in its terms and would allow too much unnecessary lawmaking, but that the parties were pledged to some such measure, and this seemed to be the only one that could be obtained, and so they would support it.

In a speech in the senate Monday, Senator Norris Brown supported the principles of direct primaries and supported the resolution for the election of United States senators by a direct vote of the people. He predicted that within six years every delegate to every national convention would be chosen by a direct vote and would be instructed to carry out the will of those electing them. Senator Brown in his speech placed himself again on record as favoring the slogan "let the people rule."

President Taft's reciprocity agreement with Canada was ratified in the house of representatives Tuesday night through the support of an almost solid democratic vote. The McCall bill carrying the agreement into effect was passed, 221, to 92. A majority of the republicans present voted against the measure, the division being 78 yeas and only 87 noes. A majority of the republican insurgents present voted for the bill. The McCabe bill now goes to the senate. What its fate will be in that body is problematical. President Taft believes if a filibuster can be avoided and a vote taken the bill will pass. He is insistent that the senate shall act one way or the other and has indicated that he would call an extra session of congress if it does not do so.

Petitions are being circulated in Buffalo county asking Representative Bassett to resign because he voted against the capital removal bill, and it is reported that practically every voter approached signs the petition. Mr. Bassett's excuse is that he did not want to "join the brewery interests and vote to punish Lincoln because she drove out the saloons." That is a very lame excuse, and is, we consider, a reflection on all the people who favor capital removal. Bassett further says "there is no demand for capital removal," which is evidence that he is not very closely in touch with the people of western Nebraska. It is just for such cases as the Bassett affair that we need the recall measure now pending in the legislature.

Let newspapers, legislators and others say what they may about who originated the scheme to remove the state capital, The Tribune insists that Colonel John Evans, of this city, was the original capital removal booster, but that the present movement was largely instituted by "Booster" M. H. Douglas, also of this city. Three or four years ago when Mr. Douglas was in Omaha, he was interviewed by a reporter of the Bee, and in the interview he expressed his views on the capital removal, and the article was given publicity by papers other than the Bee. The claim made that the brewers originated the capital removal boom as a punishment to Lincoln for voting itself "dry" is not in accordance with the facts. The movement was really started by North Platte men.

Bishop Geo. A. Beecher of Kearney comes back to the university where he was a student more than twenty years ago to deliver the Charter day address. He is a man who shows in his bearing and his conversation splendid strength and enthusiasm. His diocese covers the western two-thirds of the state. The lines including all of the Fifth and Sixth congressional districts with the exception of Clay and Nuckolls counties. In this territory more than sixty churches are scattered, and to minister to them the bishop will be obliged to travel thousands of miles by train and automobile every year. He has plans for organizing the diocese, getting in personal touch with the people on the lonely ranches, and for encouraging school development that will be certain to bring great results to the western part of the state. The university takes pride in giving such a man to Nebraska, as it is this sort of product that justifies the money the people are spending on it.—Lincoln Journal.

Complimentary to Mr. Adamson.

A recent issue of the Kilmarnock (Scotland) Standard contained this mention of a North Platte citizen: The name of Mr. Archibald R. Adamson finds a well deserved place in the literary annals of Kilmarnock. Although not a native of the town he assimilated during his stay here much of its tradition and spirit, and his "Rambles Round Kilmarnock" and "Rambles Through the Land of Burns" have delighted many readers by their genial bonhomie and naturalness. Mr. Adamson's "rambles" have carried him far from the scenes which in former years he depicted with clever pen, and for a quarter century he has been a citizen of the great republic beyond the seas. His Nebraska home has not the wealth of historic associations that clings to Ayrshire, for the roots of the New World have not yet gone very deep, but even in its brief story he has found material for his facile pen. There has recently been published by the Evening Telegraph, North Platte, Nebraska, a volume on "North Platte and its Associations," of which he is the author. It tells of stirring events that took place when this "fairest city of Western Nebraska" was a rough frontier town; of battles with "the noble red man," who is not so noble after all in real life as in the pages of Fenimore Cooper; and of gradual and steady growth from primitive conditions to the position of commercial importance that the city holds today. Our former townsman—a portrait of whom, by the way, forms a front piece to the little volume—has done his work in recording the history of a century interestingly and well.

Lower Prices of Commodities.

Do people notice the difference in the cost of many articles in food now and a year ago? They do, no doubt, when they take the pains to compare, but it is doubtful if they notice this quite as much as they noticed the unusually high levels before. Some prices have been materially reduced. Eggs, for instance, in some middle west cities cost about half what they did. The wholesale quotation Monday in Kansas City was just half what it was even a month and a half ago. Butter at 20 and 22 cents a pound is very different from 35 and 40 cents and meat is lower. Hogs are, in some instances, from $1 to $1.25 below last year's market, while cattle range downward from 50 cents to $1 and sheep $2.

These reductions, of course, are material and mean much to the consumer. But they also mean as much on the other side of the ledger to the producer. There is where the rub comes in lower prices to communities like those of this great agricultural section. The question has a dual aspect. What will please the man who raises foodstuffs and sells will not always satisfy him who only buys and consumes. (It is impossible to strike a balance in this economy that will satisfy all classes, yet we are probably working toward a better and more reasonable adjustment. But we should not lose sight of this fact—that political conditions have changed little in the last year, which must suggest that some of our theories as to high prices were far off. It is more economic than political, this power that controls markets, and in the economic world commercial speculation plays a very important part.

It is barely possible that the unloading of accumulated stocks that have been on hand for long periods is a vital factor in the lowering of prices. If this is true, prices may be expected to rise somewhat from their present level. They are bound to go on varying as seasons and supplies and other conditions that can be used to govern the markets vary. But the political control and legislation to which high prices have been so generally ascribed, but which are still unchanged, cannot be solely responsible.—Omaha Bee.

Organize Republican Progressive League.

Fifty or more republicans of the state met at Lincoln Monday and organized the Republican Progressive League, the principles of which are as follows:

"Equal opportunity for all persons who are willing to work out their destiny through energy and thrift.
"The election of United States senators by direct vote of the people, so that the United States may become more responsive to the will of the people.
"Direct primaries for the nomination of all elective officers so as to prevent the nomination of political bosses in political parties.
"The direct election of delegates to national conventions and of national committeemen with privilege for the voter to express his choice for president and vice-president.
"To provide for the initiative and referendum and recall, so that our government shall become more completely a truly representative government.
"A protective tariff policy that affords protection only where protection is needed to meet direct foreign competition, that offers no assistance to trusts and affords no shelter to monopolies; and we favor a reduction of the present tariff in the interests of American producers and consumers.
"A national income tax, so that the accumulated wealth of this country shall be compelled to pay its fair proportion of the taxes of the country; and we also favor an inheritance tax.
"The enactment and rigid enforcement of legislation which will prevent further corruption in the election of officials.
"The enactment and the enforcement of such legislation as will prevent tedious trials, expensive litigation and technical decisions in our courts of justice."
