Getting in a Muddle.

Where will the new railroad to be built by S. Durant, a promoter and a man with the wherewithal, have its eastern terminal? At Callaway? Broken Bow?

Broken Bow business men are organizing and will go after an unlimited amount of money if they are assured the promoter will end his road from Tryon at Broken Bow. They have held meetings and made plans and talked over the matter with the railroad men. While Mr. Durant has not committed himself on the subject it looks like he favored Broken Bow.

Probably voicing the sentiment of the majority of the Callaway people John Moran, president of the commercial club of that town, expressed not too enthusiastic an opinion and said to a Kearney man that the Callaway people would be slow to subscribe for this road. The attitude, it is assumed by those interested in building the road to Broken Bow, will hurt Callaway's chances and increase the probability of the road terminating at Broken Bow.—Kearney Hub.

Why "HELP" in the Kitchen NOW A DAYS is hard to get!

When a girl wants to earn money she goes to work in an office. She finds every convenience and device that will save labor and make her work more effective. If she attempts to do housework she finds most kitchens but little improved over the kitchens of 100 years ago.

Women who have Hoosier Kitchen Cabinets in their kitchens have little difficulty to get "help." If every woman owned a Hoosier Cabinet the help problem would be solved.

Playing at Death.
The mother of Ivan Turgenev, the Russian novelist, was a trying person to live with, irritable, capricious and unreasonable. On Ivan's birthday in 1845, we are told in "Two Russian Reformers," after a day of festivities, Mme. Turgenev pretended to be dying. "She sent for her confessor and, placing before her the portrait of her son Ivan, exclaimed 'Adieu, Ivan! Adieu, Nicolas! Adieu, my children!' Then she ordered her forty servants and all the men employed about the house to say goodby to her. When they had filed out of the room Mme. Turgenev declared that she felt better and asked for tea. The next day the following 'order' appeared:
"I give orders that tomorrow morning the disobedient servants, Nicolas, Jacques, Ivan, Petrof and Egor Kondratief, shall sweep the court in front of my windows."
"Those names were those of servants who had not appeared at her bedside, possibly because they were a little drunk that evening. 'Good for nothings! Drunkards!' exclaimed Mme. Turgenev. 'They rejoice at the death of their mistress!'"

The Bank Beat the Prince.
The Gentlewoman of London recalls the following story of the prince regent and Count's bank: "When George IV, was a regent he had a grudge against Count's and determined to play a trick on the authorities. In those days even the great banks kept very small reserves of cash, and the playful prince thought out a plan to close Count's". So he sent his equity round from Carlton House with a check for £100,000, fondly hoping that the bank would not be able to pay over the counter. The prince's trick, however, failed of success, as the wary old partner of the Strand bank proved equal to the occasion. He said at once to the equity, 'How will his royal highness take the amount, in gold or notes?' The equity hesitated and then said he had better go back to Carlton House to inquire. So he departed, and Count's had time to send to the Bank of England and get the cash required, but it was not needed, as the prince regent, seeing that Count's had got the best of him, did not return the check in question."

Eggs That Can't Be Found.
The eggs of some common birds of the present day have never been found. There is the robin snipe; its eggs have never been seen. An English zoologist kept a man going up and down the coast of Labrador for weeks purposely to get a robin snipe's egg, but it was in vain. The bird is known by thousands of people, but it breeds so far north and so remote from any civilization that no scientific observer can ever get to its nest ere the young are hatched and have taken to wing. The frigate bird that is so commonly seen at sea on the Pacific and off the West Indies is such a solitary bird and is so seldom seen in its nest during the hours of daylight that its egg is rare. It seems strange, but the eggs of so well known a bird as the sandpiper have never been found and are almost priceless.—London Globe.

Reversed the Proposition
Robert Wickliffe Woolley, the writer, found it necessary not long ago to take a trip west. On the dining car of the train he saw that he had in his pocket 10 cents in change, his smallest bank note being one for $50. He handed this to the porter, who went to the end of the car for a conference with the conductor.
"I'm very sorry about this," said the conductor, standing in front of Woolley and toying with the big bill, "but we haven't the change for $50. We'll just take your address and send you the change."
Woolley calmly reached over and took possession of the banknote. "You've got nothing on me," he said. "I'll take the address of the railroad and send the price of the meal."—Chicago Record-Herald.
