Experiment Station Bulletin.

The Nebraska Experiment Station has just issued Bulletin No. 117, on "Grewing Feeder Steers in Western Nebraska." This bulletin is a report of the work done at the Experiment Substation located at North Platte.

In order to determine the relative value of different kinds of forage for growing cattle in western Nebrasks, experiments were undertaken to compare the following rations for wintering steers: Ration 1, alfalfa hay ration 2, prairie hay; ration 3, cane; ration 4, one-half alfalfa and one-half to get information of their intentions prairie hay; ration 5, one-half alfalfa or condition for the Federal governand one-half cane hay; ration 6, onehalf prairie hay" and one half cane hay. The experiment began December, 1907, with six lots of steer calves the first winter they were fed the rations named above with two pounds of corn daily per steer. During the second and third winters they received no grain whatever, but were fed hay a corral. Juring the summer they all ran together in a native prairie pasture where about ten acres

A very exhaustive study is made of the relative profit and loss upon the different lots. The following general the wife of an important officer in the conclusions were drawn;

The steers that went on grass in the spring thin in flesh increased in weight faster during the summer than the steers that went on grass in good flesh.

Steers wintered on alfalfa or a ration one-half alfalfs make much faster gains during the winter than those wintered on prairie hay or cane alone, but do not make as fast gains the following sum-

Steers wintered on a ration of alfalfa during the winter and the summer following combined than steers wintered on prairie hay or cane alone.

Both yearling and two-year-old steers lost weight when fed cane or a ration one-half cane and one-half prairie hay. Steers fed alfalfa or a ration one-half allalfa gained in weight during each

The value of cattle should be approximately $1.00 per hundred lbs. more in order that they may pay for their

The value of cattle in the fall may be considerably lower than in the spring and the cattle still give a profit on the summer operation.

The value of alfalfa in comparison with prairie hay or cane is higher when fed to cattle that are to be sold in the spring than when fed to cattle that are to be sold the fall following.

With the prices used for feed and cattle in this bulletin it is not profitable to produce steers for the feed lot.

The price of cattle is too low in com parsion with the marker value of forage. This bulletin may be had free of cost by residents of Nebraska upon application to the Nebraska Agricultural Experiment Station, Lincoln.

Thirty-Six Million Hogs Killed.

"Pork enters" is a term which may rightly be applied to the people of the United States if the figures just made public by the census bureau for the year 1909 may be taken as a basis. The figures show that during that year 4,-483,000 more hogs were killed in this country for food purposes than all other animals combined, including beeves, calves, sheep and lambs, goats, kids, etc. During the year 1909 36,443,000 hogs were killed for food purposes and 21, 960,000 of all other animals.

The total number of animals slaughtered in the slaughter houses and mest packing establishments during 1909, are given as 68,403,000. These figures, however, do not represent the entire number of animals killed for food purposes during the period which the report covers, and the grand total can only be obtained, it is declared, upon the completion of the statistics of agriculture. The figures given come from 26,424 slaughter houses, which include the large wholesale slaughter and meat packing establishments and, as well, the abbattoirs, incinerating establishments and fertilizer factories where dead animals are consumed.

The primary purpose of this census inquiry, it is said, was to determine the number of hides and skins available for the manufacture of leather. These cannot be completed until the statistics of agriculture are available. But the figures so far collected place the number at 32,371,300, available for hides. These figures are exclusive of hogs, from which skirs are taken in few in-

A Spy of President Lincoln

By DONALD CHAMBERLIN

Copyright by American Press Asso-ciation, 1913.

Few persons have ever been aware of the connection President Lincoln had with spies. It is singular how those can be found to do such work, especially since an ignominious death is the penalty for being caught. The strangest feature of the spy system is that the more delicate woman should have done her share in it.

One day a girl about twenty-four years old went to Allan Pinkerton. who was at the head of the United States secret service bureau, and told him that she had lived at Richmond the capital of the Confederacy, and was supposed to be a secessionist. She proposed to go there, intending to offer her services to the Confederate government, to return to Washington and take back information to Richmond. In other words, by pretending to be in the Confederate service she hoped ment. She said her object was to make money to lift her sick mother out of poverty.

Pinkerton set several traps for her in order to test her fidelity to the of 18 in each lot, or 108 in all. During Federal cause and, having satisfied himself of it, sent her to Mr. Lincoln.

This was in 1864, when the struggle was drawing to a close. The work Mr. Lincoln gave her to do was to discover what commissary stores were in Richmond and what further supplies could be obtained.

Kate Beale went to Richmond, going through the lines without much of pasture was available for each trouble. Her accent, which she had acquired in the south, was distinctly southern and a great help to her. She wormed herself into the confidence of Confederate commissary department and asked him if there was not some plan by which she could assist southern sympathizers in the north in running eatables into the south. He told her there were only two ways. by blockade running and by getting a vessel to some spot of southern territory unwatched by northern troops She proposed to start an expedition on the last named plan. She was taken to President Davis and to the commissary general. She told them that she knew southern men or one-half alfalfa make a greater gain in Baltimore who would run supplies through if sure they would be met by a southern force. After much discussion a point was named where supplies might be landed.

During these discussions the spy learned that if Grant succeeded in taking Petersburg, all supplies being cut off from the south, the troops and people of Richmond had almost no provisions whatever to rely upon. The surrender must follow very soon.

Having gained the information she wished for, Miss Beale made her prep- ranging my outfit-I did it all myself. arations to return to Washington, The day before she intended to set out she was met on the street by a man-one of the many Washington southern sympathizers-who was carrying information to Richmond and who had seen her not long before coming out of Allan Pinkerton's office. He looked at her with a pair of steel gray thing. eyes under bushy eyebrows and with a more than ordinary interest. She did not remember ever having seen him felt sure she was in danger.

She pretended not to notice the man's interest in her. Walking on, but without turning to see if he followed her, she spied an empty cab. Beckoning to the driver, he pulled up at the curb, and she entered, teiling him to drive her to the presidential mansion. As she was driven away she saw the man still looking at her, but pretending not to notice her. When she stopped at the president's home and alighted the man came hurrying up. She went in and asked for Mr. Davis. He was busy at the time; but, having waited awhile to see him, she went away. When she passed out of the door the man with the bushy eyebrows had disappeared. Apparently her bluff game had succeeded. But she dare not remain in Richgo directly northward, she concluded to first go south and told the cabman to drive her to the battlefields that had been fought on by Lee and Mc-Ciellan two years before, and, arriving there, she dismissed him.

Hiring vehicles where she could. walking where she could not hire them, scinetimes floating in a stolen bont on the James river, she at last reached Fortress Munroe, in possession of the Federal forces. There she found a naval transport about to leave for the north and, reaching New York. took a train for Washington.

When the name of Kate Beale was taken up to Mr. Lincoln be muttered a "thank God" and directed that she should be immediately conducted to him. When she entered the room where he was and he arose to greet her it seemed to her that his tall, lank figure would never cease rising. He took both her hands in his, and his expressive eyes told her how relieved he was to see her.

"I have important news for you. Mr. Lincoln," she said, and she told him what she bad learned.

It was but a month after that that Grant took Petersburg and the Confederacy collapsed.

Kate Beale was paid a large sum from the secret service fund, with which she ministered to her mother's wants. She said afterward that the work was so fascinating that had the war continued longer she would have made another trip.

"Woman."

"The girl I'm engaged to." "Well, I like that. What kind of wife do you expect her to make?" "How should I know ber qualifications for a wife? Marriage is a lottery. Other men may marry for qualifications, but we youngsters don't pretend to forecast what a girl's going to be. And I don't believe the old ones hit it any better than we." "What makes you set your flancee down as a fool?" "I'll tell you, but I must begin back a little way. She's Madge Whitridge. only it should be Madge Wildfire instead. Not that she is so wild as she was. She's been quieted down a bit by a certain little bappening that came near resulting disastrously. She nearly caused my death."

"You don't mean it! Not intentionally, I suppose."

'Well, whether there was a spark of intention in it I don't know. You never can tell what a woman is going to do or why she does it. We can't be sure she knows herself. If Madge bad caused my death any prosecuting attorney might have made a very good case against her of doing it with malice aforethought. And to tell the truth I'm not sure but she did.'

"And you're going to marry her?" "You bet-that is, if she doesn't shake me for another fellow, though I don't might have done it before this thing I'm going to tell you about happened; but, as I said, it sobered ber, and she's quite tame. That's the time I chose for putting salt on the bird's tail.

"There's more appropriateness in this simile than you may imagine, as you'll see in a moment. But for the incident. We 'floor gliders,' as one called our dancing club of young peo ple-there was not one over twenty. and some of the girls weren't over fifteen-concluded we'd celebrate the Mardi Gras with a masquerade ball. I'd been getting sweet on Madge-Wildfire I may as well call her-and about the time the costumes were being arrang ed I was sitting up to her like a sick kitten to a warm brick. In fact, we arranged to have corresponding costumes for the ball

"This was after Rostand's play of 'Chantecler' came out, and everybody was talking about it. You know that the leading lady chicken in the play is the hen pheasant, the leading gentleman being the rooster chanticleer. We concluded to get ourselves up as these two birds. I was a month ar was a corker. I made the body of a rooster, which I strapped under my arms, with an elegant head and comb in front and a tine display of cock's tail behind, the tail being made of couldn't have told it from the real

We had spent a lot of time getting up our hird rigs and expected to make a lot of fun billing and cooing during the ball, and the worst of it was, now that we were in just the opposite condition from what we expected, we hadn't time to get other rigs."

"What was the cause of the quar

Plaintiff would further allege that she cuddling up beside me, we were as far apart as possible and when we met glared at each other. After awhile I saw her sitting to a window with mond a minute longer. Not daring to Ned Tucker. This made me all fired tenious as well as mad, and to show my spleen what did I do but go up near where they were sitting and whisk around with the intention of turning my back on Madge. I didn't calculate how near my tall feathers were to them, but it seems they brushed their faces. This made Madge madder than ever. Ned had just struck a match to light a cigarette. Madge jerked it out of his hand and held it under the tip of my tall.

"In a second the whole of it was in flames. I tried to get the rooster part of me off, but it was tied on so well that I couldn't do it. The flames ran from the tail to the wings and from the wings to the rest of the body. The whole roomful of people rushed toward me, scared out of their seven senses, every one crying, 'Put him out!' Whether they meant to put out the flames or put me out to prevent my setting them all afire I don't know. I was howling with the burns and with fear when a Roman senator took off his togs and wrapped it about me. "I was taken to a carriage and home. wasn't burned at all, but just to punish the confounded girl that applied the match I gave out that I might die. She was knocked clean out, and when I let up on her she wilted. She had put a match to my tail; I put sait on
