

THERE is no prettier custom than the wearing of a photograph of a dear one concealed within a dainty locket. It serves the two-fold purpose of an artistic article of personal adornment and the photograph is a dear bit of refined sentiment.

A Near Fire.

Sunday evening as Albert Haspel was returning to his farm west of town after attending church, he saw a fire in his pasture near the buildings. Seeing his horses, he reached the fire, which was being swept toward the house by a strong wind, and by hard work succeeded in extinguishing it. Being curious to know how the fire originated, he went to the point of its origin and found there a toy balloon, which had been sent adrift here in town and descending while lighted, set fire to the dry grass. It was a narrow escape, for had Mr. Haspel arrived thirty minutes later, his buildings would have been destroyed and probably the children asleep in the house would have been burned to death. The sending up of toy balloons should be prohibited during dry seasons when the grass is so easily ignited.
