The Chautauqua Opens

The third assembly of the North Platte Chautauqua opened Sunday afternoon under favorable conditions and with an audience of about 700 people present.

The evening attendance was close to one thousand—more than the present seating capacity of the big tent at that time. The grounds present a nice appearance, a dozen or more tents for individual use, in addition to those used by the management and societies, having been erected and are in use. These tents are located among the trees, an ideal place for camping-out.

The seating capacity of the big tent, which was insufficient for Sunday evening's crowd, was increased yesterday, and hereafter all will be able to secure seats.

The opening session Sunday afternoon began promptly on time in charge of Chas. F. Temple, who presided in the absence of Judge Grimes. The prelude consisted of selections by Rounds' ladies orchestra, which has a membership of ten, and the audience was well entertained by both orchestral and vocal selections for half an hour.

The lecturer of the afternoon, W. R. Bennett, of Ohio, was introduced and for an hour and a half held the closest interest of his hearers. His subject was "The Man Who Can."

Mr. Bennett is not only a logical talker but a capital entertainer; he introduces sufficient with and applicable stories to make his lecture spicy and to hold the strict attention of his audience. He is a rapid fire speaker, and is enthusiastic in his delivery; and not for a moment does his audience grow weary. In "The Man Who Can" Mr. Bennett selected a subject—and treats it in a way—that tends to inspire one to greater efforts; he gives a talk that must prove beneficial to every one who hears it.

Rev. Frank Crane was to have delivered the evening lecture, but a telegram announced his sickness and inability to be present. Mr. Bennett kindly consented to take his place, and gave the audience a strong talk on "The Master Thought," and as a prelude acceptably rendered two vocal solos. This second lecture was even more strong than his afternoon effort.

Yesterday morning the joint session of the Junior Normal and the Teachers' Institute opened shortly after eight o'clock. There was a large attendance of teachers and much interest was evinced. Addresses were made by Dr. Beattie, J. O. Lynn, D. F. Dickerson, W. P. Snyder, Miss Wahl and V. L. Strickland, each taking up phases of school work.

During the morning session Miss Wahl opened her Seton Indian work. Over one hundred children were present and were much interested in the work.

At the afternoon session Mrs. J. G. Beeler presiding. There was a large attendance. The usual prelude was given by Rounds' orchestra, followed by an interesting lecture by Mrs. Lake on "Equal Pay for Equal Work," as it relates to the employment of women. The lecture and cooking demonstration by Miss Norton attracted the interest of a large audience of ladies.

The attendance at last evening's session was the largest so far, evidence that the Chautauqua interest is growing. M. E. Crosby presided, and following a fine program by Rounds' Orchestra, Mr. Bennett delivered his lecture on "The Young Man and His Sweetheart," an address that should have been heard by every man in North Platte.
