The most pronounced musical success of the past two seasons in the east was undoubtedly Richard (Himself) Carle and his great company headed by Edna Wallace Hopper in "Jumping Jupiter" and now this star and this success are to be seen at the Keith next Monday evening. The critical and popular verdict is that "Jumping Jupiter" is the funniest of modern farces with music, and quite the ideal entertainment for all who seek amusement and relaxation and that practically means all theatre-goers. Although Carle has never appeared here as a star his reputation as a fun-maker has long preceded him. He was never funnier than in his present play and no comedian can be funnier than Carle at his best. The superior company of comedians, singers and dancers by whom he is surrounded constitute a cast of unequalled excellence. Edna Wallace Hopper, dainty and demure in appearance, brilliant in comedy and modish in gowning, will be much admired in the role of the artist's model. Nothing more novel than the stage business of her song "I Like to Have a Flock of Men Around Me," has ever been seen on the local stage, when four stalwart men toss her about the stage like a human shuttlecock.
