Something May Happen to U. P. that something is going to happen to urday. the Union Pacific. The retirement of ing the deaths of Harriman and Rogers business. has given that road practically a new control. The rumor that Mrs. Hariman is disposing of her Union Pacific stock this week. and the fact that a great deal of Union Pacific stock is being placed on the open market in New York is the latest cause of perturbation, which even the statement by President Lovett will not quiet.

It is rare that liquidation as pronounced as that which has been taking with the Brosius family, place in Union Pacific makes such headway without bringing the reason of enburg, arrived Saturday to visit with it to light. It is of course impossible Mr. and Mrs. VanEyke. to tell how much of the selling in the past three weeks has represented what Wall street calls real stock.

From the week ended July 22, in which the present decline began, to the closing hour Thursday 2,027,650 shares of Union Pacific changed hands, There are 2,166,326 shares outstanding.

Union Pacific's high record for the year 192 3-4, was established on July 22. Thursday, only three weeks later, the price made a new low record for 1911 at 167 7-8. This decline of 25 1-4 points spending a week with relatives. has been continuous but for one brief rally, that on Monday, when the market turned for about 5 points.

Not Much Room for Pessimism.

Reports of corn crop conditions and rainfall in Nebraska assure the state an income for the crop season that is well nigh miraculously favorable, considering the summer's history. With August rains helping out major crops, wheat, corn, and forage, this week. are assuredly large enough to carry the state, in comfort. With general crop shortage holding prices stiff, Nebraska bids fair to be one of the prosperity centers of the country the coming year. - Lincoln Journal.

"Mother," said Edith Maymura, a of sixteen and just entering the of romance. "I wish you would be a love story. Tell me one that happened."

"Vory well, dear, I known happened right in the family you about it. One solumer elegirl- we'll end her Emant thous wasn't bet real name was also to the store of the village in lived to buy a dress siler was soon to come round, and unhad given ber a five domes the to buy the dress for her tarying ent. The day was but, and she care to keep under the shade trees that lined the road I she came upon a boy he looked about Ofteen-lying noteep in the gr under one of the trees.

"Emma stopped to look at him was a bandsome lad, stender and to for his age, with a profusion of maccurly hair tumbled over his forebase His shirt was open at the neck exposing his throat. His whole nour was relaxed as only can occur in slund

"But even in sleep his face w. troubled. His clothes had evidently been good when new, but they were now shabby. Emma wondered wh he was and what troubled him There is something very winning about a sleeper. Perhaps it is that relaxation I have spoken of-that nonresistance which is so endearing in innocent chil dren. At any rate, Emma, as she stood looking down at him, took him right into her heart. "She would like to do something fo him to take that troubled look off the face and replace it with a smile. It occurred to her to drop her gold piece into his flattened straw but that tax beside him, then stand off and watch his expression when he awoke and saw it lying there shining in the min light flickering through the trees. Put if she did this she must go withou her dress She involuntarily clutched the half eagle in a fighter grip. Again she pictured the boy awakening and his pleasure at seeing the coin in un hat. And thus she wavered till her sympathy and the pleasure of giving pleasure triumphed, and she dropped her gold piece into the bat. Then she climbed the fence beside the road and hid in some tall wheat which was nearly ready to be harvested. "She waited nearly balf an hour, no daring to take her eyes off the boy for an instant, fearing she would miss that first look of surprise she was giv ing treasure to see. At last he stretch ed himself, rubbed his eyes with his fists and sat up He seemed to be trying to nerve himself to get up and go on, but was too tired to do so. Presrived Saturday to visit with Mrs. ently, with a sigh, he reached for his hat and saw the baif eagle.

> "It is questionable which would have been more delightful to a third person, the look of surprise of the boy or the expression of the little girl nidden in the wheat, clasping her hands over her breast as if to still the beating of ber little heart, her eyes beaming with pleasure and expectancy.

"His eyes were fixed on the coin for a moment, then he began to took about him for the donor. Emma enjoyshe began to think about what she should do. Would she make persett known or remain in biding and let the boy go away with her treasure without knowing who had given it to him? I she took the former course he would return the gold piece. If she took the latter she would have given away her birthday present to one who could not even know her as the giver of

"But Emma was not a girl to go this far in doing a kindness and turn back. She kept very still, watching the boy, and it seemed as if she could read his thoughts. She fancied ann saying, holding the coin in his annut and looking at it. 'I'm going to invest this money and work and save and make a fortune out of it.' "How many years, mother?" "Let me see. Emma had grown to be twenty-five years old, and she was about twelve when she gave away her birthday present. That means thir

The reason in offered it was that when a poor tast on his way to the city to look for Altuation he had gone to sleep on the outskirts of the village and some on had dropped a five dollar gold pieinto his hat. He had made to ky to vestments with the money, and it had grown from $5 to $20,000. But more than this, it had given him hope and courage, and he had succeeded in oth er directions. He wished to return the gift with interest, and, not know ing the donor, would give it to the
