SAM AND THE BULL

By M. QUAD

Copyright, 1911, by Associated Literary Press.

He was an old man who had come down from the mountains one summer's day, and as we sat on the steps of the village postoffice he told this story: "My naybur, Jim Pitkins, is havin' heaps of trouble with his two boys just now. One of 'em was over to the railroad t'other day and wanted to fight the bulgine, and t'other went to town and got his eye almost put out in a fight. Reckon they'll grow up to be a cantankerous pair. I had a son—Sam, the only child we ever had—and he died some five y'ars ago. In one way I'm sorry and in another way glad. It made me kinder lonely to hev him go, but I could figger up that it was for the best.

"That boy had a powerful good heart in him as a general thing, but that was days when the devil seemed to hev possession of him. It wasn't no good to switch him, and when he was outer sorts it wasn't no good to argue with him. He was fifteen y'ars old when I cum home from the war, and his head was swelled up big 'nuff for a man of t'oty. He finally got so that he felt like rubbin' up agin me. I was at work in the garden one day when he cum home from the Co'ners a-sittin' right and left, and bimbe he cum out to me and sez:

"Pop, mebbe yo' calls yo'self the best man on this yere mountin'." "Mebbe I do," sez I as I looks at him outer my left eye.

"But yo' ain't, though, and I kin prove it." "Then who is?" "He stands right here befo' yo', and his cognomen ar' Sam. Dad, I'm goin' to whop yo'."

"Better git into the house, boy, and hev yo'r mother gin yo' some bread and butter and 'lasses on it." "But that boy had the worst kind of swell head," said the old man, "and he was alrinst in thinkin' he could whop his pop. He gits higher and higher, and bimbe he sails fur me. I knowed what was cumin', and befo' he could wink twice I flopped him on his back and then whopped him till he hollered for mercy. He lived two y'ars arter that, but he didn't try that game on me any mo'."

"The older he growed the more cantankerous he got, and one day the ole woman cum to me with tears in her eyes and sez:

"Sam's a-gittin' wusser and wusser all the time, and I'm almost hopin' the Lawd will take him away." "The Lawd couldn't manage him if he did git him," sez I.

"Mebbe he could. Mebbe he's got a pen up thar in heaven to put Sam into and keep him till he's bin made over. I'm goin' to dye my shawl black and fix up a mournin' bonnet, fur that boy of ours will be brung home dead befo' he's a month older."

"Well, so he was—he was," said the old man, with a touch of pathos in his voice. "He was down to the Co'ners one day to blow and brag with the crowd a-bagin' out thar in them days, when a man cum ridin' on a m'el to say that Ell Clark's bull had broken out of the field and was comin' up the road. That bull was a big un and had hooked two horses to death. As the man was givin' the alarm the bull showed up down the road. He was pawin' the air and makin' the heavens quake with his beller, and sich as had horses tied up was mighty spry to turn 'em loose and git 'em away. Nobody didn't propose to git in the way of that bull and take chances—nobody but my son Sam. It was a chance fur him to show off, and he riz up and yelled:

"This is the day I hev been livin' fur. I'll go t'oth and take that bull by the horns and flop him on his back." "The men tried to argue with Sam, but he was sot and pullin' off his coat and flingin' down his hat, he walked out and begins to paw and beller same as the bull. The critter stops to look at him, and fur a minit or two he must hev wondered what it was. Then his eyes began to glare and his tail to stand out, and the crowd hollered to Sam to git over the fence. He never mindin' 'em, but with a roar and a beller he run in on the bull, was tossed twenty feet in the air, and when the animal got through with him there wasn't much left to bury. A man cum up to break the news to us. I wasn't home at the time, and he sez to the ole woman:

"Mrs. Sneed, ar' yo'r son Sam home today?" "He ain't," says she.

"And do yo' know why he ain't?" "Not exactly, but I reckon it's kase he's sunwuhar else."

"That's right, Mrs. Sneed—perfectly right and proper. Yo'r son Sam ain't home and ain't comin' home, kase he's got bizness up thar in the land of angels and golden streets, which will detain him fur sun time."

"It was a sad case, but me and the ole woman hev allus reckoned that Providence had a hand in it. Sam had got that cantankerous that thar was no holdin' him back. He'd got to fuss around 'bout. If he hadn't tackled the bull he might hev got into a row in town on 'leckshun day and bin the means of a dozen men bin killed. Yes, it was better so. I hated to see him go, and he was an only child, but cantankerousness was bound to smash him all to bits sooner or later, and we had to make the best of it and reckon that Providence knowed his bizness."

The Literary Lady. In the course of duty and society obligations a senator one evening was a guest at the house of a man noted for the number of literary people he gathered about him. The senator had been told that the guests would be either authors or people competent to discuss literature from Confucius down to the present day.

Finding himself beside a middle aged but handsome woman, the senator observed that she supposed she was a literary person. She pleaded guilty and added:

"I think the world of Iridex, and I like Haythorne's 'Red Letter,' and I'm simply mad about Dickens's works."

The senator has never been able to figure out who Iridex is, but he believes the literary lady meant Ouida—St. Louis Republic.

One of Nature's Mysteries. The sodden light, still one of the unsolved mysteries, has shown very regular pulsations in intensity and form. In a communication to the French Academy of Sciences M. Billekand has pointed out that these variations agree closely with the periods of regular magnetic waves of polar regions, and this would seem to indicate that the sodden light is an electric phenomenon. A number of experiments suggest that it may be part of a ring of luminous matter surrounding the sun in the plane of its magnetic equator.

Universal and Eternal. "Yes, life is universal and eternal, for time is one of its factors—yesterday the moon, today the earth, tomorrow Jupiter. In space there are cradles and tombs. The red carbon stars will soon be dead; the hydrogen stars, like Vega and Sirius, are the stars of the future; Procyon, Copella and Areturus are the stars of the present. Aldebaran seems to be already an autumn fruit." So said Flammarion.

The Place to Paint. A party of gunners were painting the guns and wagons of a field battery when a sergeant came up to them. "There will be an inspection tomorrow," he said. "Be sure you paint all those parts which no one can see. For that's just where the colonel is sure to look!"—London Telegraph.

The Aesthetic Beard. A man does not properly appreciate the limitations of headgear until he grows a beard. A man with a beard cannot take liberties with his hat—Outfitter.
